Now We Can Win! Crow Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — Happy Liberals, poring over polls showing them gaining on the Opposition Progressive Conservatives for the second month running, said today they have the momentum needed to win the next general election.

"I think it demonstrates the continued upward mobility of the Liberal party," said Senator Al Graham, party president, as he and other Liberal parliamentarians gathered for their regular weekly meeting.

"Our momentum is steady."

The latest Gallup poll, conducted in early January and released today, showed Conservatives with a static 40 per cent of the decided vote, Liberals up one with 39 per cent, the New Democratic Party down one at 17 per cent and others with four per cent.

All changes, including a drop to a still sizeable 29 per cent from 33 per cent in the number of undecided voters, are within what pollsters describe as their margin of error.

Prime Minister Trudeau brushed aside questions about the poll.

But Opposition Leader Joe Clark, despite his virtual tie with Trudeau's Liberals in the popularity rating, said he would form "a majority Conservative government" if an election was held today.

"I'm naturally encouraged we are still ahead," Clark said prior to a private meeting with his MPs.

"I think that there has been very little movement in Liberal popularity for the last little while."

Works Minister Judd Buchanan noted that the poll was taken before Clark's haphazard tour of the world in January, before the Opposition leader's controversial call for a "stimulative deficit" and before internal Tory turmoil over the question of negotiating sovereignty association with Quebec.

Those factors all would have a negative impact on the Conservative showing in next months's poll, Buchanan said.

"The Tory bubble has burst," said a spokesman for NDP Leader Ed Broadbent. In November, Clark had a 10-percentage-point lead over Trudeau's Liberals.

Clark said he hopes Trudeau's slight gain will encourage the prime minister to call an election now.

"We are going to count on the poll in which Canadians have a chance to vote rather than in the Gallup itself," Clark said.

Environment Minister Len Marchand said he is particularly pleased with Liberal gains in his native British Columbia.

"Now things are looking good," he said.

The party would capture more B.C. seats in the coming election than it did during the July 8, 1974 vote. Then, Liberals took eight of 23 in the province.

. . .Drunken Skateboarder Pays Penalty

BRIGHTON (Reuter) — A British soldier was fined £15 ($35 Canadian) on Tuesday when an English court found him guilty of being drunk and disorderly in an incident involving a skateboard.

Police said Godfrey McDonnell, 20 was charged after he fell down a flight of steps while riding the skateboard.

He was naked at the time except for a crash helmet and sneakers.

BNA Nearer Home?

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers edged closer Tuesday to agreement on guaranteed human and language rights in a new constitution.

But they remained split on the amending formula for a proposed new constitution and future division of federal-provincial powers.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he now feels free to rewrite basic laws in areas under federal control — such as laws protecting national language rights.

However, he said future moves to rewrite the constitution pose serious problems for his government.

As a result of the conference, provinces will be able to provide one-stop divorce, custody and property-settlement courts, legal areas to now straddled both federal and provincial jurisdictions.

Trudeau described the conference as a success, but not so Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta, who wants greater provincial control over natural resources.

Much to the chagrin of several premiers, B.C. Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said he was concerned the proposed constitutional equalization of wealth among the provinces was too rigid and said B.C. wanted more time to study it.

Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney virtally broke up the conference in confusion Tuesday when he attacked Trudeau and Ontario Premier William Davis for pushing patriation of the British North America Act prematurely.

Price Jack-Up Inflates Profits 21% in Year

Whopping Profits Poured into Banks

Times News Services

Canadian companies jacked up prices last year and increased profits 21 per cent over a year earlier, the government's inflation monitoring agency said Tuesday.

The centre for study of inflation of productivity said the 21-per-cent increase in profits for the first nine months of 1978, to $9.3 billion, was made although sales had increased only 11 per cent.

The centre said this indicates higher profits came from higher profit margins.

The centre said that although it recognized that profits had to be increased from their erratic levels of the 1970s, the increase should be gradual so as not to set off a further round of inflation.

It said the higher earnings should be at least partially reinvested to create more jobs and contribute to the longer-term recovery of the economy.

The centre's report singled out for particular notice the 45 per cent increase in profits in the retail trade sector, saying that large department stores increased profits by 87 per cent in the period, motor vehicle dealers cleared an additional 42 per cent and food stores 42 per cent more.

Other retailers showed an increase in profits of 33 per cent, the centre said.

Meanwhile, in the Commons, Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand gave the opposition vague assurances the government will do something about rapidly rising food prices.

Former consumer affairs minister Herb Gray of Windsor, Ont., said growing public concern over rising prices and high profits in certain sectors of the economy may convince the government it is time to establish some kind of selective controls program.

Gray foresaw the possibility of legislation which would prevent companies from increasing prices to consumers so they could make healthy profits.

On Monday New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent called for the establishment of a selective price control program if companies will not volunteer to keep their profits to what he called reasonable levels.

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers and businesses paid chartered banks between $200 million and $500 million in excess profits between 1968-73, a report published by the Economic Council of Canada says.

Released Tuesday, it says the extra earnings by the chartered banks also resulted in excess taxes of $200 million to $400 million being collected during the period.

"If no excess profits and excess taxes had been earned by the Canadian bank shareholders and Canadian governments, then the cost of banking services to consumers would have been lower than that prevailing during the 1968-73 period," the report says.

"For example, borrowers of bank funds could have been charged a lower rate of interest and lenders to the banks could have earned a higher return on deposits."

Although published by the Economic Council of Canada, the report carried a disclaimer saying the findings had not been endorsed by members of the council and were the personal responsibility of the author, Jack Mintz.

Mintz says in the foreward the study was done to determine if the banks earned excess profits since 1967, after the present version of the Bank Act was passed. The Bank Act is under review again and proposed amendments are before the Commons finance committee.

'Con Man' Ducks Jail For $36,000 Fraud

Gordon Bruce Barlow, a 35-year-old city businessman with a criminal record for white collar offences, was given a suspended sentence in county court Tuesday and placed on probation for three years for four worthless-cheque offences involving $35,775.

Judge Leslie Cashman told Barlow if he gets into more difficulties with the law he doubted that any court would do anything else than jail him.

"It's up to you," he said.

Barlow, who operated Works West and Design Research while working as a building designer, pleaded guilty Jan. 16 to two counts of fraud and two counts of false pretence.

His lawyer, David Wilson, had urged the suspended sentence and probation approach while Crown counsel Peter Birkett, who called Barlow a "professional con, no more, no less," urged a penitentiary term — two years or more.

Judge Cashman said he considered it an exceptional case. He said probation is a form of punishment and he attached four conditions:

— For the first year, Barlow must report once every two weeks and thereafter once a month to a lay probation officer.

— Barlow must make restitution to West Coast Savings Credit Union, 2067 Cadboro Bay Road, for $2,850 and to Alpina G.T. Accessories Ltd. of Vancouver for $2,162 before his probation expires.

— He must make reasonable efforts to find employment but it must be only as an employee. He is prohibited from being a principal or manager of any firm.

— Barlow must seek psychological therapy.

Gunman Gets $200 At Store

City police today are looking for a quiet-spoken gunman who held up a grocery store at 1903 Birch Tuesday night.

A police spokesman said the man entered Turner's Grocery about 7:30 p.m., pulled out a black handgun, and ordered storekeeper Mrs. Lee Wallis to hand over the money in the till.

Mrs. Wallis placed the cash — about $200 — in a brown paper bag and the man left.

Mrs. Wallis said the man was in his 40s, of average build with short, brown hair and dressed in a black-and-white checkered shirt or jacket.

She told police the man was quiet-spoken and his manner was cool and deliberate.

BANK SQUAD DRAGNETS BOMBERS

VANCOUVER (UPC) — A special task force began investigating three recent bank bombings Tuesday amid fears the bombers may soon strike again.

Police S.Sgt. Bob Burns said the bombings, so far the cause of about $235,500 damage seem to be occurring "about once every five or six days."

$250 AN OUNCE A GOLD RECORD

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold hit a record high of $250 an ounce in London and Zurich today amid continued heavy buying, sparked partly by political uncertainty in Iran and the continuing decline of the U.S. dollar.

Gold, a traditional hedge in times of monetary uncertainty, opened in London at $246.37 an ounce, $2.12 above Tuesday's closing price and just short of Monday's record of $246.50.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed the mid-morning price at a record $249, but soon after the price had soared to $250 in what dealers described as a "very busy market."

In Zurich, Europe's main bullion market gold hit $250.12 by mid-morning.

B of M Union Signs Contract

Employees at a Victoria branch of the Bank of Montreal have become the first unionized bank workers in the city to sign a collective agreement with their employer.

The nine employees, members of the United Steelworkers of America, signed a contract Tuesday with the bank's branch at 3481 Cook St.

Terms of the one-year agreement, effective Feb. 16, include a nine-per-cent increase in wages.

Roy Legge of Toronto, director of industrial relations for the bank, said today the provisions of the contract match those given non-union personnel in January.

Negotiations began last September, Legge said, and about eight meetings were held. Agreement was reached without the need for a federal conciliator, the first time this has been achieved in negotiations between major banks and unions in Canada.

The spokesman for the steelworkers union was not available for comment.

The USA is among several unions which have authority from the Canadian Labor Congress to organize bank workers across Canada on behalf of the CLC's Union of Bank Employees.

The CLC has stated that eventually the organizing unions will take over bank employees to the UBE.

The Victoria bank workers are not the first in B.C. to reach a collective agreement.

Last December, the Bank of Montreal signed a contract with employees in Agassiz and Ashcroft. They are members of the Office and Technical Employees Union.

Auto Workers Join U.K. Strike

Times News Services

LONDON — Britain's wave of national strikes today spread to its biggest automaker and export earner, British Leyland, and raised fears that the company's future might be jeopardized.

Nearly 19,000 workers at British Leyland's largest plant in Longbridge, Birmingham walked out to protest the company's refusal to grant a productivity bonus. Company officials said the workers do not turn out enough vehicles to earn the bonus.

Elsewhere, conditions worsened during the five-week-old wage revolt by more than 1½ million workers that has threatened to topple the Labor government. More than 1,200 schools remained closed and most hospitals were only admitting emergency patients.

Pay talks in the National Health Service broke down and public service workers threatened to step up their widespread action.

Wildcat strikes and slowdowns by non-medical staff already have forced half of Britain's 2,300 hospitals to refuse all admissions except emergencies and almost the entire ambulance service is dealing only with urgent cases. Soldiers are performing some tasks.

Meanwhile, the leaders of more than one million low-paid public-service workers, including garbage collectors, school janitors and gravediggers, threatened to increase their disruptive industrial action unless local council employers come up with a much-bigger pay offer today.

As the garbage piled higher on city streets, the dead remained unburied and more schools closed, Prime Minister James Callaghan told Parliament that some workers "seem to think the sky's the limit" on pay claims.

The minority Labor party government emerged bruised from the fourth of a series of debates on the crisis. Their majority, which stood at 24 in the first debate Jan. 16, slipped to six when an Opposition challenge on a technical motion was defeated by 276 votes to 270.

Rosy Jobless Picture Painted?

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government is "painting a rosy picture" for Canada's unemployed, opposition members of Parliament charged Tuesday following the announcement 118,000 more Canadians were out of work in January than in the previous month.

"When you take into account the rate of hidden unemployment . . . we have 1.25 million Canadians unemployed in this country," Conservative MP James McGrath told the House of Commons.

"The finance minister and the prime minister (have a) propensity to paint such a rosy picture of the economy and of job creation prospects."

Statistics Canada Tuesday reported the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate stood at 8.1 per cent in January, unchanged from December. But the total number of Canadians out of work last month stood at 997,000 compared with 859,000 the previous month.

In Victoria today, local Canada Employment Centre manager Wally Pickering said the area's unemployment rate has been higher than announced for at least a year.

He was commenting on a jobless rate in January of 11.4 per cent for Victoria.

Pickering said in recent years Victoria's unemployment figures were related to an estimate of what the population is. It has become clear the estimate is too high and so it has been revised downwards.

This has the effect of increasing the percentage of those unemployed, although the number of people unemployed may be unchanged.

Until economists relate past percentages to the new population base it will not be known whether unemployment has gone up or down in Victoria.

The regional economists of the CEC had been using the 1971 census of Victoria plus an estimate of increases in the population and thereby reached a figure for the population base.

A comparison with the 1976 census, however, has showed the estimate was too high. Now the 1976 census is being used as a starting point.

In Ottawa, meanwhile, Finance Minister Jean Chretien defended the government's record of creating employment, saying more than 450,000 new jobs were created between January 19[illegible] and the present.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent asked Chretien whether the federal government would introduce job-creation measures and decrease interest rates to combat the unemployment situation.

But Chretien said high interest rates were necessary to keep the Canadian dollar stable.

NEED WORK? NORTH HAS IT

Labor Minister Allan Williams today advised young people to go where the work is and that, apparently, means northern B.C.

Commenting on Victoria's and Vancouver's high unemployment rates, Williams said: "Any young man or woman who has skills and who wants to work can find it, but it may not be where they want to live."

Williams says he doesn't know whether it is the weather, lack of housing and other amenities or other reasons that deter job seekers from going north.

But according to the mayors of northern B.C. communities there are jobs available up there.

Williams said he doesn't think the restraint practised by the Socred government contributed to the 11.4 per cent unemployment rate in Victoria last month.

The rate is only slightly higher than for January last year, and the statistics are somewhat suspect because of the small sampling, Williams said.

Jacked-Up Prices Hike Profits 21%

Citing weekend reports that beef is expected to rise in price by 18 cents a pound in supermarkets this week, Saskatchewan New Democrat Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton Melville) demanded immediate release of the government's long-awaited food policy.

He said it should include some way to keep major food companies from profiteering at the expense of consumers. Nystrom said there is no good reason for supermarkets to raise beef prices this week when changes in the stockyard price of cattle normally take at least two weeks to reach grocery store shelves.

Allmand told Nystrom he has no plan to announce a comprehensive food policy until it is ready.

(Beef prices have gone up an average of 20 cents a pound so far this year in Victoria with no let-up in sight.

(Victoria retailers expect to increase their prices an average of 18 cents a pound over the next 10 days.

(But price increases will vary sharply by the cut. For example, ground beef may go up only about a dime a pound while quality cuts of beef tenderloin could rise as much as 70 cents a pound before month's end.

(Cattle totals are at a low level in Canada, pushing up the price. No immediate price relief is expected. Rather, further increases are likely before spring, area wholesalers have warned.)

The federal government, meanwhile, introduced legislation Tuesday it says will lead to more competitive prices for consumers while reducing deceptive advertising in the marketplace.

Allmand made the comment as a bill amending the Trade Marks Act was given first reading in the Senate.

The bill, in the works for several years, would prevent a Canadian trademark owner from using it as a means to charge higher prices to Canadians than what is charged for the same product in other markets.

The legislation also forbids advertisers from making misleading statements when trademarks are used in comparative advertising.

In Toronto, the president of the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada said profits in the food and beverage industry have been grossly overestimated by the federal government's inflation monitoring agency.

David Morley said revised figures issued Tuesday by the centre for the study of inflation and productivity confirm his group's contention that "earlier assertions of rapidly increasing food industry profits are completely invalid."

Refugee-Filled Ship Can Stay

HONG KONG (UPI) — A freighter loaded with refugees from Vietnam that slipped into colonial waters early today will not be forced out to sea, but the Hong Kong government has not decided whether it can land, a spokesman said.

The 3,000 refugees aboard the 3,506-ton freighter Skyluck will be provided food and water daily but until the government decides what to do with them, they will stay aboard the Panamanian-registered vessel.

"The government will naturally assume responsibility of the refugees while they remain on the ship," official sources said.

The government has launched an investigation to determine where the ship picked up the refugees, the spokesman said.

He said the Skyluck, with its 26-member crew, sailed from Singapore Jan. 12 and took about 27 days to make what normally is a five-day voyage.

"We are not sure how many refugees are on board," the spokesman said, but he added that the captain told the government there are "2,500 ethnic Chinese and 500 ethnic Vietnamese on board."

The Hong Kong government was informed by Singapore this afternoon the ship left Singapore early in the morning on Jan. 12 "with no passengers" and had "declared Hong Kong as its first port of call," the spokesman said.

A medical team boarded the freighter today and "reported that conditions were generally satisfactory."

Three refugees — two men aged 22 and 34 and a 4-year-old boy — were taken off the ship and admitted to hospital. The spokesman said their condition "is not serious."

A Marine Department launch provided the ship with 5,400 pounds of provisions today including bread, biscuits, tinned fish, meat and vegetables, fruit, butter, tea and condensed milk.

Kill A Viet A Day

BANGKOK (AP) — Every Cambodian loyal to the toppled government of Premier Pol Pot was urged in a special broadcast Tuesday to "kill at least three or four Vietnamese invaders each day." A radio station believed to be in China broadcast instructions Tuesday on the art of guerrilla warfare. It also claimed that guerrillas had killed 300 Vietnamese soldiers and destroyed 19 tanks in fighting along national highways and near provincial capitals in a four-day period ended Monday.

Isfahan, Parts of Tehran Controlled by Khomeini

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Supporters of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini have taken over the municipal government in the second-largest Iranian city of Isfahan and have control of slum areas in south Tehran.

Striking civil servants also pledged today to support to Khomeini's choice to head a provisional revolutionary government.

The newspaper Ettelaat quotes a spokesman for Mehdi Bazargan, picked to head the new regime that would replace the government of Premier Shahpour Bakhtiar, as saying Bazargan will announce his programs during a speech Friday at Tehran University and present his cabinet to Khomeini on Saturday.

The newspaper says Bazargan will attempt to run his government with civil servants who have been on strike. Strikers at the justice ministry and staff workers at the official Pars news agency pledged loyalty to Bazargan in statements today. Similar statements were issued Tuesday by striking employees of Iran Air and the health ministry.

Tehran newspapers also say that Khomeini, 78-year-old Shiite Moslem leader of the Iranian revolution, is "slightly ill" and that a doctor recommended rest. But Khomeini appeared on schedule today at a window of his headquarters to receive thousands of admirers.

Khomeini's religious movement has control of slum areas in south Tehran, where volunteer "Moslem policemen" are seen awkwardly directing traffic.

Meanwhile, a Canadian Forces Hercules plane has completed evacuation of 58 persons — including 33 Canadians — from Iran and plans no further flights, an external affairs spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said the Hercules flew to Ankara, from Tehran, on Tuesday. The persons taken from Iran must make their own arrangements to return home from Ankara, he said.

About 110 Canadians remain in Iran, the spokesman said. The external affairs department ordered the Hercules transport plane sent to Ankara late last week as tension rose in Iran following Khomeini's return to that country.

The external affairs official said Canadians in Iran were told they could leave aboard the Hercules if they wished. Among the 33 leaving were seven Canadian embassy staff and dependents, reducing embassy personnel to 14 in Tehran.

Canadian Hercules planes took out more than 400 persons in early January.

There were about 1,500 Canadians in Iran in September but many have since left aboard commercial flights or the government aircraft.

Torture Reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. state department has received new reports from its embassy in Israel alleging Israeli torture of Palestinian prisoners, including the use of electrical shock and "extreme forms of sexual sadism," according to the Washington Post.

State department officials refused to comment on the allegations Tuesday.

The confidential cables from U.S. diplomats, which began coming in last May 31, alleged that the most severe torture included "refrigeration, use of electricity, hanging by the hands or feet, extreme forms of sexual sadism, interrogation accompanied by starvation, enforced sleeplessness," The Post said.

It said the information indicated "the possibility that the use of brutality in the interrogation of Arab political prisoners is a systematic practice, involving the use of trained personnel, backed up by far-reaching administrative support and protected by standard methods of suppressing complaints and blocking their investigation."

Fearing Knife, Cancer Victim Uses Laetrile Only to Die From Cyanide

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A woman who suffered from breast cancer but feared that surgery would deform her has died of cyanide poisoning after taking massive doses of Laetrile, the Alameda County coroner said Tuesday.

"She was trying every avenue possible to avoid the knife," said Robert Pye, former husband of the victim, Jo Anne Etta Pyle, 42, of nearby San Leandro.

"She was willing to try anything rather than be deformed, as she put it, and there are a lot of people willing to take advantage of a person when they're down," he added.

ZAIRE FOOD RIOTS FEARED

BRUSSELS (CP) — Belgium is sending troops into Zaire, its former colony, because it fears food riots by the famished population of the capital city could threaten 30,000 Europeans, the Belgium foreign minister was quoted as saying today.

Foreign Minister Henri Simonet reportedly told Belgian news editors the problem in the former Belgian Congo differs from the May, 1978, rebel invasion of the copper-rich Shaba province, formerly Katanga, that resulted in an airlift of Belgian and French troops.

"All those who have lately had contacts with Zaire have received disquieting reports on the dramatic reaction of people who are hungry," said Many Ruys, one of the editors who attended Tuesday's briefing by Simonet. 'Europeans feel directly threatened in the suburbs of Kinshasa where the police and the army are not efficient."

Simonet announced Tuesday what was described as a routine decision to send paratroops, air transports and support units to Zaire, and sources said 250 troops will be sent to the western coastal military base of Kitona by Monday at the latest.

Year of the Child

The International Year of the Child, declared for 1979 by the United Nations, means different things to different countries. Here in B.C., for example, the government's main contributions seem to be a renaming of the year to "The Year of the Child and Family" and a rewritten child protection act, covering, at least vaguely, such matters as child abuse and neglect. The federal government is providing millions of dollars to citizen groups wishing to tackle such problems as high school dropouts, youth unemployment and juvenile delinquency. Down at city hall, the most important issue relating to the year seems to be whether to hang a banner across Douglas Street to promote public awareness.

Undoubtedly these are all most worthwhile projects. We want to provide the best possible life for all Canadians. Child abuse, neglect, unemployment, school difficulties, family breakdown and other problems certainly detract from that ideal state for far too many of our children. Programs that will help to alleviate the effects of these problems must surely be welcome.

Yet even as we start these programs, we should pause to see what the International Year of the Child means in some other parts of the world.

We are concerned about children who are occasionally forced to miss meals through parental neglect; in many Third World countries, millions of children never know a full meal. Despite the best efforts of their parents, they fall asleep each night hungry, their bellies bloated from malnutrition.

We are concerned about children who drop out of high school; in many countries, few children get beyond the elementary school level. Millions leave school before attaining even basic literacy.

We are concerned about children who cannot find jobs when they leave school; in many countries, children find jobs at much too early an age — begging on city streets or working on tiny farms.

We are concerned about children shunted from home to foster home to group home; in many countries, thousands of children have no home but the street. They sleep under bridges or in ditches; they eat what they can find in garbage cans.

To make 1979 a truly International Year of the Child, surely we in luckier countries should devote extra resources to help these millions of children as well as our own. Many non-profit organizations are doing a fine job in working in Third World countries. What they need is increased support, partly from our governments but especially from individuals whose own children have the good fortune to be well-fed, healthy and happy.

The Salesman

Phantom Subdivisions

More and more, the provincial government's plan to sell Crown land to British Columbians looks like less and less — in all respects except the amount of publicity being generated.

The verbiage follows the old pitchman's routine of repeating all the astounding claims for your product at least three times, and when that palls, talk some more about what you just said.

So we heard Premier Bill Bennett promise several times last fall to do something about an old election pledge to make land available to the people. "Bring an end to the artificial shortage of land for housing. Make government owned land available for housing at cost," was the premier's undertaking to the voters.

Lands Minister James Chabot tantalized us further last month with an announcement that within three or four months Crown land would go on sale at about 10 per cent below market value, through a lottery to avoid competitive bidding that might up the price. A study would be completed in a few weeks on the lot size most in demand.

A few days after, he said 64 million acres of government holdings around the province would be chopped up into three- and five-acre parcels for sale to B.C. residents for summer cabin plots and small farms but, stop the presses, that has now been "clarified." Sixty-four million acres is just the total from which an unspecified smaller amount will be detached for sale, according to Chabot.

The phrase Potemkin village may acquire new meaning in B.C. Millions of acres of recreational subdivisions created out of Crown land take on a brief life of a week or two, then are erased as a slip of the minister's tongue.

Stay tuned for further announcements, is the obvious message out of Chabot's office these days. But can anything come close to fulfilling the publicity buildup? Unless the government has something truly spectacular to unveil in May — the hedging statements of recent weeks suggest otherwise — it would be wise to wait until it has something to announce.

She's Impractical

I read with disbelief part of an article in the Jan. 29 Times (Welfare Girl Dumb, Ugly?) stating that a woman with two young children, who receives a $489-a-month GAIN allowance and a $40 family allowance, resides in a $350 a month two-bedrom apartment in James Bay.

I find this irresponsible, as there is plenty of accommodation available in Victoria at reasonable rates. (I live in a beautiful two-bedroom apartment in an excellent location, for which I pay $260 monthly.) To allow $28 each week for groceries, while living in such a oostly apartment, strikes me as ridiculous. The woman's children do not benefit from such budgeting and I question the common sense behind it. For the woman to then write an essay (for which she wins a prize) itemizing her complete budget to show that the GAIN allowance is barely adequate, while spending $350 a month for accommodation, shows a lack of practicality. — Gayle Evans, 106-1020 Burdett Avenue, Victoria.

Revolting Spending

In October, 1978 Premier Bennett said: "What we need is a spending revolt."

What we got was revolting spending. Even after slashing the human resources budgets, here is a comparsion between the expenditures of the former NDP and the current unholy alliance of Socreds, Liberals and Conservatives. (Source of NDP figures, Public Accounts). (Source of Socred figures, Estimates of Expenditures.)

Make It a Series

Last night I listened to Bruce Hutchison discuss Canada's Time of Trouble with the university extension association. His analysis was familiar but there was a chilling immediacy, based on his recent days in Ottawa and the U.S., in what he touched upon. There was also, I felt, a new note of realistic hope.

The last was something most of us feel an urgent need for these days. I assume its essence will eventually find its way to your columns in one of his occasional contributions but it was the full context of his presentation at the university which set off the power of the major points he made. Could he not be persuaded to offer it in a series of related articles to allow a more far-ranging audience than the full house he so patiently stirred last night?

Picking sense from nonsense and electing representatives courageous enough to identify both will be something each of us will face before this critical year is out. A confusion of voices and motives is already making it difficult. Possibly more than any other Canadian, Hutchison encourages the individual to listen to what his applied reason and highest instincts tell him.

The more encouragement of that nature we have the more responsibility we can face the testing that will be worse before it's better. — Frederick Watt, 404-1101 Hilda Street.

Seniors' Home

Just recently, I had read in the Times that Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis is asking Victorians for ideas on the future use of St. Ann's Academy grounds.

The Sisters of St. Ann had pioneered with the first settlers of Victoria and braved many hardships with those who lived through the early days.

It's worthy to mention the Sisters of St. Ann's for their contribution toward the operation and the administration of St. Joseph's Hospital and the academy for many years. Their charitable work in those institutions was carried out with deep affection, and great devotion, to any human being regardless of race or creed.

I propose that we build a senior citizens' home on this historic site. The grounds are located in the heart of city; it is within walking distance of doctors, dentists, shopping malls and Beacon Hill Park.

The proposal is not a new one. In Port Alberni, senior citizens' homes were built and are operated by a board of directors composed of church organizations, fraternal orders, unions and elected members.

Likewise, in Calgary the Anglicans and the Catholics built 180 units for their senior citizens; and named it after the Anglican archbishop of Calgary who had spearheaded this project.

Hugh Curtis has laid the cards on the table. So, it's up to us to decide what we wish to erect on this site? It is our legacy now. Either we build some kind of charitable institution for the needy on these grounds, or else destroy the last vestige of St. Ann's Sisters in Victoria. — F. J. Bogdanski, 4020 Magdelin Street.

Anger and Disbelief

I wonder how many people read with disbelief and then anger the account (Residents' Protest Stalls Home for Handicapped; Times, Jan. 30) of the Redfern Street residents' protest against a group home for mentally handicapped young people? Have Victorians really sunk so low that they place property values above the comfort and happiness of those less fortunate than themselves? May I suggest that Mr. Kilshaw's following form a group to study Jean Vanier's book Eruption to Hope, and perhaps become acquainted with a few mentally handicapped people. — Audrey Fawcett, 57 Wellington Avenue.

No More Gas Tax

The proposed three-cent increase of gasoline to be paid by the long suffering motorist, is, in my opinion, an outright invasion of the motorists' civil rights.

Gasoline is now heavily taxed by all governments, causing it to be sold at almost three times its actual value. Mr. Motorist, it is time one and all took a stand on this. Why should you be asked to subsidize the bus rider so he may ride on the roads you are paying for. If you are a businessman or his employee you are paying for your customer to bypass you and ride somewhere else in a city bus.

Incidentally, wasn't the last three cent increase in gasoline supposed to go to the service station operator, so that he could show a profit when he sold a gallon of gas? No, he didn't get it but we still pay it and the operator makes the same narrow margin of profit that he made before.

Let's all stand up and be counted and refuse to pay this outrageous tax. — W. I. Davidson, 831 Dunsmuir.

Strange Bedfellows

I am struck by the mixture of rationality and irrationality in both the progressive and conservative factions of B.C.'s politics.

On the one hand some of the progressives have been attacking the very building block of progress and the important foundation for world stability — an adequate supply of reliable energy. Although the initial costs are high, once a dam is built, the sun does all the work in transporting free of charge the water to produce, for untold years, the electricity which assures us warm houses and producing factories; whether the Arabs double or treble the cost of oil or not. The same is true for nuclear energy, a remarkable human achievement, which receives no end of abuse.

It is surely easier to tackle the problems of nuclear waste and radioactivity than to tackle the problems of a wrecked economy, floundering from any sudden squeeze on our oil supply. The deliberate withholding of oil or gas by the oil companies, or the major oil-producing countries, won't be nearly so likely, if there are competitive, well-developed alternatives to oil on hand.

Although the conservatives seem to have their feet on the ground, they have exceeded all bounds lately in glorifying the traditional economic system. The imagined nobility of holding shares in the machinery and in the labor, which is the source of all our wealth, has so affected the leaders of our government that they are doling out the people's holdings to everyone in the province, hoping that the scramble to become an owner and thus a significant person, will infect the whole population with their own malady.

In the process, the actual owners of our productive facilities will, as a bonus, get a further boost to their self assurance. Like the dominant leaders in a pack of canines which have cornered the best bones, they can revel in their self esteem as the smaller fry eye and covet and make plans to acquire bones from their fellows. This sudden revelation by the party in power into the wily brute soul of untempered capitalism is indeed another strange aberration manifesting itself among the shapers of our province's destiny. — Edwin Johanson, Vananda.

W.A.WILSON

West Has a Long Memory

OTTAWA — Major amendments to the Canadian constitution will require a degree of imagination and flexibility on the part of the Canadian people and their leaders which so far shows no sign of developing in the country.

No one professes much love of the status quo and few, Premier Rene Levesque and his followers excepted, have firm over-all ideas how to change it into something more satisfactory. Where they have firm specific ideas, as Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta does, for instance, on resource policy, they find themselves facing solid opposition, often as strong from other provinces as from the federal government.

On the face of it this inability to break out of the past is unreasonable. The provisions of the British North America Act and the various conventions and customs which make up our constitution cannot possibly be the only structure under which Canadians can govern themselves satisfactorily. Yet often the reasons why specific changes are sought are not even understood by their opponents.

They Don't Understand

The Alberta premier's determination to secure firmer control of his province's resources and the opposition to it is not a bad example of the rigidities that are encountered in our constitutional discussions. Legally, of course, control of resources already is a provincial field but Lougheed believes that provincial control of resources is not very real or meaningful if another government, in this case the federal one, can control the price at which they are sold.

He shocks some federal authorities even more severely when he talks of provincial control of the uses to which resources are put. Yet a real problem does exist for Alberta and, for that matter, Saskatchewan as well.

History provides the explanations. Quite apart from periods of general price control during which many people have seen the price of their product set by some remote authority, producers in these two western provinces have had two postwar experiences of having their prices forced below market levels as an act of government policy.

The first was just after the end of the Second World War, when Ottawa negotated a wheat agreement with Great Britain which forced western farmers to sell to the British below world prices. Today this sort of deal would be handled as foreign aid and the nation as a whole would bear the cost of the below-market sales. That was not the case back in the 1940s — the individual farmers bore the entire cost of a national policy. It was deeply resented as an economic injustice.

That may seem ancient history which should be forgotten by now but it marked the thinking of a generation of western farmers and their children remember it still.

Much more recent is the dispute over oil prices after OPEC forced up the world price. Canada's economy is open and almost without exception we buy and sell at world prices. Alberta's initial desire to secure world prices for oil was natural and instinctive, although not fully realistic. A bitter squabble with federal ministers followed and in the end prices far below world levels were negotiated. Oil still sells in this country below the international price.

Alberta authorities will concede now that even if the federal government had stood aside, the pressures upon them from other provinces would have been so severe that they would have had to phase in the price increases in any case. Their estimate is that, without federal action, the price of oil would be about where it is today, although some of the earlier increases would probably have come more quickly.

Apart from provincial pressures, the two western producing provinces would also have encountered the problem that American prices — which affect Canadian competitiveness — were melded from domestic and international ones and also remained below the world level. This too would have become a Canadian pricing factor.

But while the ultimate results were not greatly different from what would have taken place any way, the federal intervention left the Alberta authorities convinced that their control of natural resources was considerably less effective than they had thought. They would like to strengthen their constitutional control and the idea upsets both the federal government and consuming provinces such as Ontario. It is almost a textbook example of the difficulty of securing change in the complexity of the Canadian federation.

The thought of provincial control of the use of resources alarms federal politicians and officials to the point that one remarked the other day that it would destroy the common market which is an inherent part of the federation. Again, there are historical reasons for the provincial demand. A few years back, the federal government decided to build a state-owned petrochemical plant. The Albertans badly wanted it in their province, since it was to use feedstock from their oil wells. The issue of location brought to the fore the yearning of areas producing raw materials to see them processed locally rather than far away. The federal government put the plant in Sarnia, the Ontario city which already has Canada's highest per capita income.

A Common Basis

Albertans and their government were bitterly disappointed and resentful, both over the decision itself and because the federal action obviously made it far more difficult for any one from the private sector to launch a petrochemical development in the west. Canada already has the problem that its market for their products is still severely protected.

It is this event, and the general problem of securing the processing of raw materials near their point of origin, that has produced the Alberta demand for some degree of control over the use of resources. Without securing that, they believe that history, some of it very recent, has shown how difficult it will be to establish processing industries in the west.

The essential pressures behind such demands are very similar to those underlying Quebec's — that without change, objectives of great importance to a community cannot be attained readily, if at all. The demands differ, the basis does not.

Davis Snaffles Liberal Plank

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

OTTAWA — Timing in politics is everything.

It is why that most unlikely practitioner, Bill Davis of Ontario, so infuriated his fellow premiers with only three minutes to go to the bell at the closed constitutional conference on opening night.

With the seconds ticking off on the clock, with a hundred ravenous scribes chomping at their microphones and pencils after being barred all day from the session that supposedly is to make or break Canada, Davis effectively yanked out from under Pierre Trudeau the potential Liberal election theme.

After playing possum to the point of immobility for the last three years at these wool-gathering sessions, Davis planted down on the conference table a nine-page proposal that steals away the long-standing Trudeau threat: to run away to Westminster and bring the tired, tattered BNA documents to the colony where it belongs.

Whose Xerox Gored?

"He is the greatest thief of all time," said one premier, shaking his head in resigned frustration at the skillful, cynical Ontario ploy.

"It's the very same thing I proposed in 1976, in my naivete, in my first federal-provincial conference," said Premier Bill Bennett. "Guess who dumped all over it then? — Bill Davis."

With the premiers and the PM locked up all day in their 11 solitudes, the word was filtered through the designated leakers to Ontario reporters just minutes before the first day's session broke up: Davis had a statement. In fact, of course, it had been prepared on the Xerox machine many hours — if not months — previous. What it said when delivered — carefully pre-empting all the other premiers streaming out of the in-camera think-tank — was possibly the most straight-forward sentence in English issued by Premier Davis since he entered office.

"We should," it said, "bring the constitution home to Canada."

It was a remarkable retreat to straight-forward sentence construction. One of Davis' aides, watching serenly as the voracious TV cameras descended on the pudgy Ontario premier, said, with a sly smile of satisfaction, "Usually he thinks in paragraphs and speaks in essays."

One of the refugees from the closed session, defeated by the clever Ontario upstaging, said, "I wonder where Ontario goes for its smug lessons?"

The Davis coup, good enough to survive to the 11 p.m. national news, could not detract from the fact the prime minister has been effectively sandbagged by a collection of premiers who do not want to be used for federal election fodder.

For the first point, it has been established that agreements that cross federal-provincial lines must be approved only with unanimity. B.C.'s Bennett, recalling that the 1971 Victoria Charter was killed only by the veto of Quebec's Bourassa, established the principle that any other province's veto in 1979 is just as good as Quebec's no-no eight years earlier.

"In football," said one of the observers who's sat in on these affairs for more than 10 years, "there's a way of taking care of a ball-carrier in that one guy hits him high and the other guy hits him low. That's what they did to Trudeau."

With Trudeau painted into the corner of an election deadline that can't stretch beyond spring, the revengeful junior partners have suddenly discovered their own strength.

There is Alberta's Peter Lougheed, perhaps more in trouble with his own party than he is with the voters, who has openly declared that he wants to go to the electorate as soon as possible after this posturing is over. Lougheed's arrogance has isolated himself from his brethren and, having reached too far, has left him somewhat naked and alone at the final constitutional deadline before a federal election, his bargaining power worn out.

Saskatchewan's Allan Blakeney, the only intellectual equal of Trudeau in this group, has tried to follow up on the leadership role he assumed at last fall's constitutional gabfest.

But since then he has acquired the overwhelming electoral mandate he wanted. Strangely enough, say those inside the closed sessions, his power has declined. He has nothing more to trade. He is the first out to face the cameras, the longest to linger, the last to leave. But, having achieved his aims of becoming an equal, he has nothing more to prove once closeted with his peers.

A Sterling Snoozer

Frank Moores of Newfoundland? Having announced his coming resignation, he is in no mood to be a Maritime martyr and is in agreement with those western premiers who, like small-town boys entering a poker game, demand of Mr. Trudeau that for once he define the rules before the final day begins.

Sterling Lyon of Manitoba? At one stage of the closed session Monday, a government adviser looked across the room and said sotto voce to a companion," I agree with the premier of Manitoba." The companion looked and the premier of Manitoba was fast asleep.

The voters of Canada may share that view, but for Trudeau, it is not a boring subject. The suddenly burgeoning bit-players of the minor provinces are closing in on a squeeze-play, while the oldest and slyest province of all is trying to steal off with the marbles.

Anti-U.S. protesters parade in Taipei: "Most Taiwanese are paralyzed with fear and confused"

Taiwanese Dread Security Police

By EDWARD FRIEDMAN

MADISON — Scared students from Taiwan have often shyly showed me letters from their parents telling of visits from the Taiwan military security apparatus. These letters said that the military-security people told them, "Get your youngsters to stop their political activities." The alternative was the usual threat delivered by those offering "protection."

Visiting Taiwan's dreaded political prison on Green Island 13 years ago, I found a frightening Alcatraz-like embodiment of the nature of the military-security forces who still control the ultimate levers of coercive power on Taiwan. Two Taiwanese tell me it has not changed. Then, as now, political prisoners had been serving indefinite terms until they recognize the error of their ways.

The members of this military security apparatus first arrived on Taiwan in the late 1940s. They were the defeated, armed side of China's revolutionary civil war. These exiled mainlanders imposed their rule in the bloodbath begun on Feb. 28, 1948. The continued use of secret-police tactics makes this security force and the right wing of the ruling party, the Kuomintang, an object of hatred to virtually all Taiwanese and even to many mainlanders residing on Taiwan.

I lived in Taiwan from 1964 to 1966, and visited it most recently in 1970, and, of course, since then have had daily contact with a diverse group of students from Taiwan.

I used to wonder why Taiwanese voting in local elections would waste their vote on an anti-Kuomintang candidate. A local party official having more clout with the central authorities would more likely be able to deliver goods and services (as my Kuomintang landlady did when she got me train tickets during New Year's after everything was supposedly sold out). The Taiwanese invariably answered: "Because that person is against the KMT."

More recently, Taiwanese economic power and more genuine elections have made the reactionary military police most unhappy. Prosperity and democracy have shifted some power out of police hands.

The island's security interests postponed elections on Taiwan when President Carter normalized relations with China. Had the elections taken place, the Kuomintang would have taken a beating. They were frightened. They panicked. Their progaganda highlighted the sad fate of Cambodian people and the refugees from Vietman. The party said that the issue was the Kuomintang or genocide, but what the Taiwanese pictured was not a horror but liberation from a hatred oppressor.

The Kuomintang security police imposed military rule, claiming to fear Peking. Actually, what scared them was the democratically expressed voice of Taiwan. In their panic, they branded as a Communist agent anyone with realistic suggestions about how best to take advantage of Peking's and Washington's common interest in regional peace and good trade relations with Taiwan. Fear spread. Spokesmen for anti-Kuomintang forces complained that now there was more freedom in Peking than Taipei.

I recently visited a Chinese mainland museum depicting the inhumanity of that Kuomintang security force's final panic before fleeing to Taiwan. In torture chambers on the hilly outskirts of Chungking, all remaining prisoners were slaughtered. One anti-Kuomintang liberal assassinated in that final period, Wen I-to, is today a hero to many Taiwanese. Pictures and exhibits in that museum document American complicity in the horrible security-police operations. It is painful to realize that some Americans again today mistakenly confuse the vile interests of the Kuomintang security force with the actual interests of Taiwan's people.

Most Taiwanese are paralyzed with fear and confused. Some have romantic illusions about a totally separated Taiwan. A few, often to protect fortune, career and family, mouth Kuomintang slogans. May increasingly have concluded that, while military strength is needed to discourage and make costly a military venture from China's mainland, no stable, prosperous future is possible for Taiwan's people without closer economic and cultural association with Peking.

The Kuomintang's security force, however, has branded every peace-directed initiative for 20 years as traitorous. The party's military police require an atmosphere of tension to maintain its control. Peace will undo them.

The joyous celebration of Taiwan's citizenry of the removal of that mainlander security force would rival Iranians' glee on the shah's departure.

Could Go On Ad Infinitum

LONDON — The news that some tobacco firms, prevented by British law from advertising cigarettes on TV, have been trying to sneak packets of them into other advertisements — for vodka, say, or margarine or hair-oil — has made us sit up and wonder what we've been missing till now. Why did we all have this folksy old idea that an ad plugged only one product?

There were exceptions, of course. There were curious ads where you couldn't make out whether it was the Slingit washing machine that was being advertised, or the Scrape-It powder you were urged to use with it. There were some very odd advertising magazines where mine jolly host talked incessantly of boot-polish and floor-cleaner (I'm not sure if they made them illegal, or whether the chaps just finally poured their beer over him). And every time that you see an aeroplane shimmering to a standstill in a film, you know that's the airline that brought the film crew across half the world for free.

Mostly, however, it's been one slot — one product. But now we have a whole new field. It's pointless to pay for prime-time TV when, by making the girl in the hair-rinse ad drink a glass of my product as she's seduced, I can get the benefit of the whole thing for nothing. And there's no percentage in painstakingly putting together a long sequence about cows and barns and wheatfields designed to sell factory margarine when I can simply slide a slab of the stuff beside the brandy in a cigar ad, and have it served to Milady by the same pompous butler.

It needn't stop at products. Politicians have some difficulty with TV, because the only great leap forward the nation ever makes is towards the off switch when a political broadcast is threatened. But if the politicians could get themselves into regular ads it would all be different.

I can just see it: there's some floury old biddy going on about pancake mix, so reassuring, so peaceful: "Haven't I seen that face before somewhere?" Of course you have, you dope — that's Mrs. Thatcher. Or it could be Rosalyn Carter. Or Simone Veil, the French minister of health. Or Margaret Trudeau — no, perhaps not Margaret Trudeau.

In regular ads, knocking copy isn't allowed; you mustn't be openly rude about the other guy's product. But this way . . .! Suppose you're advertising non-skid tires, and the shot shows you braking safely while some clot skews across your path at a traffic light; the man then putting his face out of the window and saying wetly "Oh, sorry!" could be a dead ringer for prime minister or president.

It would certainly be healthier for politicians to plug themselves in other people's ads than for them to keep plugging other people's products — or vested interests — in their own utterances; and that happens everywhere, even if London hasn't quite achieved the multi-million dollar lobbying scene that Washington achieves.

But we might manage to leave it all in such a marvellous state of confusion that no one knew who was working for who: is Giscard d'Estaing selling those silk socks or are those socks selling Giscard? Is that man Nixon now finally trying to sell you a second-hand car? (at the rate they're going, he'll be selling Americans a second-hand presidency if they don't look out).

Anyone who wished to jack up their image a bit could do it this way: the has-beens could get in on popular Heinz Beans ads, tax-collectors could get into Help the Aged ads guiding old ladies across the road; even Roddy Llewellyn might stage a come-back, helping advertise an Austin Princess, to remind him of Princess Margaret.

All ads have secondary effects; all ad men know it; it's just that, until now, it's been unadmitted and uncontrolled. But from now on we'll have to look closer at what is being put across.

The truck in the chewing-gum ad may turn out to be what the ad's all about (trying to make Britain accept the vast Juggernauts of Europe); the handsome man in the ad for Scotch may be part of an anti-women's lib campaign and really just advertising the man; and even the way a mother spoons Squiffo into her infant may turn out to be a plug for — oh horror! — a new book on child care. Watch out, and don't say I haven't warned you.

Du Pont Cda.

Du Pont of Canada had substantial increases in both sales and profits for 1978, the cmpany reported.

Profits totalled $10.2 million, or $1.28 a share, an increase of 34 per cent over the $7.6 million, or 94 cents a share, reported for 1977. Sales reached $662 million from $534 million in 1977.

The company attributed the gains to higher volumes, and said price increases were insufficient to offset higher costs. Earnings increased generally in the fibres and chemicals operations of the company, while profits from plastics and packaging film declined slightly.

Cdn. Utilities

Canadian Utilities Ltd. net earnings for 1978 from operations attributable to common shares increased 22 per cent.

Total net earnings went up from $27.7 million in 1977 to $35.6 million in 1978. Earnings per share increased from $1.61 to $1.97.

The return to near-normal weather conditions in 1978, with temperatures lower than the previous year's mild temperatures, helped improve the earning's picture, a company release said. Each major regulated utility subsidiary achieved a return on invested capital close to that established by the Alberta Public Utilities Board.

Canadian Utilities sold 341 billion cubic feet of natural gas, up 18.4 per cent from 1977's level of 288 billione cubic feet. Electric power sales climbed 6.5 per cent to 2,512 million kilowatt hours.

The company has three major subsidiaries: Alberta Power Ltd., serving, an electric power company serving east-central and northern Alberta and parts of the Yukon and Northwest Territories; Canadian Western Natural Gas Ltd. of Calgary and Northwestern Utilities Ltd. an Edmonton-based natural gas utility.

CGE

Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. reports 1978 earnings of $33,612,000 or $4.11 a share compared with $30,534,000 or $3.73 a share in 1977.

Earnings for the fourth quarter were $15,234,000 or $1,86 a share, compared with $15,440,000 or $1.88 a share for the last quarter of 1977.

The company said Tuesday the improvement in earnings came from productivity gains in the large electrical apparatus and materials segments and from improved earnings of its appliance affiliate.

Placer Dev.

Placer Development Ltd. reported its consolidated net earnings for the year ended Dec. 31, 1978, were $20,184,000 or $1.67 per share after extraordinary items, compared with consolidated net earnings of $21,509,000 or $1.78 per share in 1977.

The company said earnings before extraordinary items in 1978 were $26,209,000 or $2.17 per share.

It said that earnings increased before extraordinary items despite a continuing labor dispute at one of its Gibraltar Mines Ltd. copper operation. The company cited higher sales volumes and metal prices in other Placer interests, as well as the premium on the United States dollar for the improvement.

Molybdenum was cited by the company as the most significant contributor to its earnings. It said, however, that higher prices obtained for the product were partially offset by lower production and shipments along with higher income taxes due to declining depletion allowances.

Placer said the extraordinary items resulted from its U.S. coal properties and Australian grazing properties.

It said the value of coal reserves in Kentucky, acquired in February, 1978, had been written down by $4,095,000, and added that a potential sale of the Australian grazing properties had indicated a reduction in value of $1,930,000.

Premier Cable

Premier Cablevision Ltd. announced net earnings of $1,148,000 or 34 cents a share for the three months ended Nov. 30, 1978, compared with $1,038,000 or 31 cents a share for the corresponding 1977 period.

Gross operating revenues were $8,885,000 for the three months, compared with $8,772,000 for 1977.

Montreal Trust

Montreal Trust registered a 23-per-cent increase in profits last year as a result of improved performance in all sectors of the company's operations. Net operating income totalled $7,039,000 or $2.73 a share, compared with $5,709,000 or $2.22 a share in 1977.

Net income was $7,087,000 or $2.75 a share, up from $5,757,000 or $2.28 a share in 1977.

Total assets for the company, which offers fiduciary, real estate and deposit services in Canada, Bermuda and the Bahamas, were $1,026,718,000 in 1978, up from $957,217,000 the previous year.

Domtar

Domtar Inc. has reported 1978 profits of $63.3 million, or $4.23 a share, a 135 per cent increase over the $26.8 million, or $1.78 a share, in 1977.

Sales also increased, totalling $1.254 billion last year, compared with $1.018 billion in 1977.

The company cited a wide range of reasons for increased earnings, including penetration of U.S. gypsum markets thanks to a lower-valued Canadian dollar, and wage settlements and production efficiencies which improved its cost competitiveness.

Domtar has also acquired profitable gypsum plants and mines in California and Mexico. The company plans further plant acquisitions in 1979 in Ontario.

Domtar expects even greater gains for 1979, given a lower valued Canadian dollar and satisfactory labor agreements.

Cordova Residents Get Pit Curb

Saanich council's public works committee served notice Tuesday night it won't consider any expansion of the Trio Ready-Mix gravel pit operated in Cordova Bay.

Committee members passed a motion reaffirming the boundaries of the site where gravel extraction is now permitted under the municipality's soil removal bylaw.

The action was taken following concern by residents of Alderley Road that two residential properties adjoining the gravel pit — 5343 and 5347 Alderley — might be purchased by the company with the intention of expanding its operations.

Specifically, the residents' letters complained that one of the two homes has been advertised for sale complete with gravel rights.

They claimed the beauty of the surrounding residential area has deteriorated significantly due to the expansion of the gravel pit over the last several years.

One resident, R.B. Mainprize, 5399 Alderley, said when he purchased his property in 1963 he was assured by Saanich the gravel pit had reached its maximum size.

"This was prior to Trio purchasing from the former owners. Since then a vast expansion has taken place, much to the detriment of the area," he added.

Several aldermen agreed with municipal engineer Cliff Warren's comment that the reference to gravel rights was almost fraudulent advertising.

Ald. Irene Block suggested the municipal solicitor investigate the possibility of forcing the property owners to stop such advertising but Mayor Mel Couvelier was doubtful any legal action could be taken.

It was pointed out to the residents that Saanich could not stop Trio purchasing the two properties, but that municipal approval for gravel extraction is by no means automatic.

Ald. Howard Sturrock said the gravel removal boundaries should be reaffirmed to allay residents' fears.

Fred Pennie, 5366 Alderley, told the committee: "There's a damn great hole in the Alderley area and our reason for being here is to make sure it doesn't get any bigger."

Saanich Minds Own Business At Camosun

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier persuaded members of the public works committee Tuesday night to respect territorial prerogatives and not interfere in a controversial issue concerning Oak Bay.

He was referring to the proposal by Camosun College to clear part of the 26-acre Hudson's Bay Wood for construction of a parking lot serving a proposed new building on Argyle Avenue.

The building site is in Saanich while the woodland is on Oak Bay's side of the border.

A citizens' group submitted an 825-name petition asking Saanich to back its stand that the woods be left in their natural state, and some aldermen were inclined to lend support via a letter to Oak Bay council.

But Couvelier pointed out that while it was easy for Saanich to win points by supporting a popular cause, "it would be a lot more responsible for us to hold our silence on what is going to be a difficult decision for our colleagues in Oak Bay."

In other business, the committee recommended:

— Immediate expenditure of $130,000 for widening and upgrading busy Darwin Avenue between Saanich Road and the municipal hall. Municipal engineer Cliff Warren said an early start on the job will avoid layoffs in the public works department.

— Including Viewmont Avenue, in the Royal Oak area, in a proposed extension of the sewer enterprise avenue. The committee was told that 14 of the 18 residents on the street are in favor of sewers.

— Widening the shoulder of Blenkinsop Road between McKenzie Avenue and Pearce Crescent, to provide a gravelled pedestrian footpath. The project will be tackled in two phases, each costing $12,000.

— Release of $28,000, provided in this year's provisional budget, for the purchase and installation of 12 bus stop shelters.

Encore Given Music Recital

One of the most popular recent recitals held in University of Victoria's 200 seat recital hall is to be repeated.

The second performance will take place Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss.

The program is dedicated to early music by Monteclair, Couperin and J.S. Bach and features artists Margot Andison, soprano; Elissa Poole, baroque flute; Jesse Read, baroque bassoon, and Erich Schwandt, harpsichord.

Another major recital scheduled for the same evening, is also likely to fill the UVic recital hall to capacity when violinist Susan Lang Eddlemon and pianist Kathleen Solose join in concert, performing works by Bach, Prokofiev, Kreisler and Sarasate.

Eddlemon is assistant concertmaster of the Victoria Symphony and a fine soloist. Of a recent recital in New York, the New York Times commented that she "could do just about anything she wanted with her chosen instrument."

As a senior member of the Victoria Conservatory of Music piano faculty, Solose has won many plaudits for her contributions to the music performance scene. A proficient and sensitive pianist she spent some time in Russia studying and performing before returning to Canada and accepting the appointment at the Conservatory.

Belfry's Joe Egg Superb

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

To be profoundly moved to tears and laughter by a play; to be absorbed by the reality of its presentation while at the same time being intrigued by the author's imagery and artifice — what more could one ask of an evening in the theatre?

There is not a scrap of doubt that Don Shipley's production of Joe Egg for The Belfry Theatre is a stand-out. It is in fact one of the most moving, most compelling, most ideally cast and convincingly performed plays seen in this city in a long, long time.

It is exceptionally well paced (and pacing is an element frequently overlooked). The tempo basically is quick and taut, the contrasts and pauses used with maximum effect.

Knowing that no two performances of a play are minutely alike, nor are any two audiences — one of the fascinations of live theatre — it did not trouble me too much on the night I attended, that some of the most pungently ironic lines evoked no response; a reference for example to the fact that it is all right to commit mass murder over a question of territory or trade routes but not to end the painful bare existance of a hopeless human vegetable.

Playwright Peter Nichol's personal experience prompted this caring and meaningful play in which a couple is trapped in an existance focussed on the presence of a hopelessly brain-damaged only child, their daughter, Joe. And if that seems like a depressing theme, remember that it is not the theme but the way it is handled that is most affecting.

Nichols has handled it with a wild raunchy humor. This is black comedy but it is comedy that arises inevitably given the kind of people involved and the desperation of their plight.

Bri and Sheila are people whistling in the dark; he keeps a hold on sanity by being outrageous — exerting a manic sense of humor on the situation; she by fantasizing over their daughter, refusing to acknowledge the hopelelss condition.

Denis Arndt, a brilliant actor new to Victoria (superficially in style and appearance he suggests a young Cary Grant), and Sylvia Hatchman are wholly believable, funny, heart-wrenching in vivid, superbly controlled performances.

Just as complete and striking in the portrayal of people reacting in their individual ways to Bri and Sheila's problem, are the creations of Terence Durrant as the well-meaning but interfering friend, Freddie, and Ingrid Blekys as his chill, unsympathetic wife. As for young Jill Carfra, she is quite incredibly affecting as Joe.

Margaret Barton plays Bri's mother, giving it much more than the stereotype interpretation it could so easily receive from less gifted hands and from a less perceptive director. The performance is a cameo, finely cut and polished, and adds the final touch to the total sincerity of this example of professional theatre.

Underscoring the skill of the players is their smooth handling of Nichols' stylized technique of allowing each character to address the audience in establishing background information. It clarifies much and fleshes out individual portraits but could be awkward rather than delightful as it is in these expert hands.

A last word but an important one is reserved for Ken MacDonald's design which provides so much more than a theatre set. It's a place where people live filled with the paraphernalia of personality, the mute expressions of a particular daily living.

If you care about the theatre and about people, see this one for sure. It will be at the Belfry until Feb.17.

Future of Regions Still Left in Limbo

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

It will be late spring at least before regional districts know their future, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Tuesday.

He told a special meeting of the Capital Regional District board that defining the role of regional district government is more difficult than he had thought.

"In the meantime, it's business as usual," he told the directors.

When he took over the ministry in December, Vander Zalm said he would have new guidelines by February.

At Tuesday's session Vander Zalm listened politely to the directors' probing but was evasive about what he has in mind.

He did promise that regional districts and other levels of local government will have some say before any amending legislation is introduced.

He said recommendations from the regional district review committee are just one of the options the government might take.

A non-commital Vander Zalm listened as directors gave their view on what should be done with electoral areas.

They ranged from letting people in such areas as the Western Community determine their own future to forced incorporation by the provincial government or the abandonment of individual municipalities for the setting up of a kind of "super city" on a ward system for the whole regional district.

Vander Zalm was told that provincial technical committees continously held up rezoning applications for many months, even more so now because of the uncertainty of regional districts' roles.

This results is regional districts having to take the flak for policy set by the provincial government, the minister was told.

Vander Zalm suggested land-planning decisions might be eased by the use of a Planning Act which would spell out the appropriate steps and set deadlines.

He confirmed his approval of the provincial government's guidelines on how the regional district will finance public transportation when it takes over from B.C. Hydro on April 1.

The first step being an increase of three cents per gallon on gas and diesel fuel on April 1, the second an increase in Hydro rates and the final phase, a levy on property taxes.

The minister was told the predicted deficits for public transportation threatened property owners with tremendous financial burdens if the proposed 60-40 cost-sharing formula is followed.

"There is nothing to stop us looking at the formula some years down the road," Vamnder Zalm said.

Degree Isn't Ticket for Job, Students Told

Students must develop realistic goals or graduation will just be the beginning of disillusionment and heartbreak, a University of Victoria seminar was told Tuesday.

Three speakers at a meeting jointly sponsored by UVic and the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce warned students jobs are scarce and they may have to settle for something outside their specialty area, at least to start.

The speakers were Prof. Alex McAuley, head of the UVic Co-op Program which gives students job experience before graduation, student council treasurer Russ Katzer, and Susan Vallor, manager of the Victoria Youth Employment Centre and representing the chamber at the seminar.

Vallor said there are 20 people chasing every job available in Victoria and even having a degree is no guarantee of employment.

"Students must prepare for this reality. I counselled 12 university graduates recently and 10 of them had very negative feelings. There is a lot of rejection regardless of how good you are."

She said students must realize they may have to consider moving to another city or taking a job not very interesting to them if they hope to get employment immediately after graduation.

Some may find no work at all.

McAuley said a university degree is not a passport to employment. In fact having a degree sometimes increases the amount of disillusionment a job-seeker will encounter.

Many graduates will have to consider taking additional training to prepare themselves for the job market.

With jobs being scarce, it is important for schools and universities to stress vocational counselling at all levels.

It is useful at university and it might be even more helpful to expand it at the high school level, he said.

Katzer, the student representative, also stressed the need for additional vocational counselling.

A flow of information between the university and the business community is vital, he said.

Without it, fewer graduates would find work and this in turn would increase the burden on the welfare rolls.

He said the seminar is important as a place where students can get a better grasp of the job situation.

An informal discussion followed the speeches.

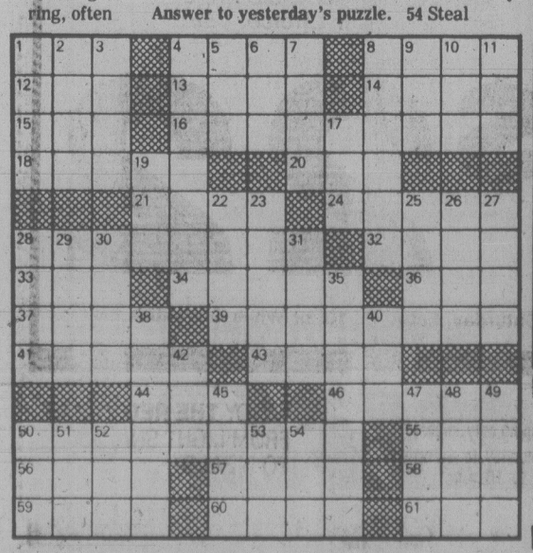
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



Hydro Profits Off U.S. Chill

VANCOUVER (CP) — A cold-weather spell late last year that had northwest United States residents using electricity at a record rate produced increased third-quarter earnings for British Columbia Hydro.

Hydro said in a news release Tuesday that it recorded a net income of $15 million for the third quarter ending Dec. 31, 1978, a substantial improvement over the $28 million loss reported at the halfway mark in the fiscal year in September.

Robert Bonner, Hydro chairman, said the turnaround "was the result of normal seasonal variations in sales, and the sale of surplus electricity to the United States."

Divisional manager Jim McCarthy said the corporation had not counted on or budgeted for the sales to the U.S., which had to buy the electricity because the cold snap resulted in heavy demand by users in the western states.

Hydro said, however, that the third quarter income figure was still $5 million less than the corresponding figure for 1977.

Gross revenue for the nine months totalled $636 million, up $53 million from the same period in 1977.

Hydro said the increase was achieved despite the fact that export sales of electricity dropped to $22 million in the nine-month period in 1978.

Fire Damages Columbian

COQUITLAM (CP) — A fire early today caused heavy damage to newsroom facilities at The Columbian, but was not expected to have any effect on today's publication of the evening newspaper.

City editor Brian Kieran said the fire, which started in a garbage bin full of teletype tape, damaged telephone equipment, teletype machines and a laserphoto machine through which the newspaper receives its wirephotos.

The fire will not affect publication of the Vancouver Express, a thrice-weekly newspaper produced by unionized employees of the Vancouver Sun and The Province involved in a lengthy strike-lockout. The Express is printed at Craftsmen Printers, a subsidiary of The Columbian.

Save-Moresby Group Confused Over Chance

The provincial government may yet hand down a reprieve for the Southern Moresby wilderness area in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

In a recent letter to the Islands Protection Society (IPS), a group dedicated to preserving the virgin area from logging, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said a number of possibilities for setting the area aside are under investigation.

In a letter dated Jan. 22 Curtis states: "With reference to your inquiry regarding World Heritage Site classification for Southern Moresby, the (provincial) Heritage Conservation Branch has indicated that this possibility is being explored along with several other alternatives for long term preservation."

World Heritage designation, which is made by the United Nations, would preclude extensive logging in the area.

But in a news release today the IPS said Curtis' response is somewhat confusing because Forest Minister Tom Waterland has announced that renewal of a tree farm license for the area has been offered to Rayonier of Canada (B.C.) Ltd.

"Blocks of this tree farm (TFL 24) are in direct conflict with the establishment of a Southern Moresby World Heritage Site.

"Islands Protection members wonder what is really happening,." stated the release.

Meanwhile the IPS is petitioning through the Supreme Court of B.C. to have a court ordered public hearing into the TFL renewal.

The issue will go to court in Vancouver Feb. 9.

"We hope that through a court hearing we can get this issue out of the ministerial closets and give the people a chance to be heard," said Gary Edenshaw, a Haida carver and one of the petitioners.

Maintenance Level In Schools Fell 20%

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Maintenance levels in Greater Victoria schools decreased 20 per cent last year, according to an administrative report on allegations of serious school deterioration.

In his report school superintendent Allan Stables also predicts four years of headaches for trustees.

He says the board can look forward to a yearly loss of government revenue over the next four years due to declining enrolment.

Combined with old buildings, escalating salary increases and uneven growth patterns it all adds up to major financial and administrative problems for the district, Stables said.

Greater Victoria has one of the worst declining enrolment problems in B.C., but assistance promised by the education ministry has so far failed to materialize, he said.

As a result the board and administration have been forced to cut costs in every way possible.

Maintenance staff cutbacks recommended last year by administration and approved by the board were accurate.

"A significant problem was created, however, when after having decreased the number of staff, the board decreased the budgetary funds for relief time," Stables said.

Administration was unable to hire relief to provide for illness and school management programs suffered, he charged.

Of seven carpenters on staff, on the average two are away each day throughout the year due to illness and holidays, according to the report.

They are away with pay, but the district has no funds for relief workers.

He denied a charge by one parent group that administration has no control over quality of work contracted out.

Administration has complete control of contracts and only lets them when work required can't be handled by the district's work force, Stables explained.

He cited as an example a contract to exterminate termites at McKenzie elementary school. The contract had been let several weeks before the termite infestation charge was made formally to the board by the parents group.

Stables also denied charges by the group of rodent excrement in schools. He said an administrative search failed to find excrement and the matter has been droppped.

Stables admitted a number of maintenance problems listed by the parents group, but noted conditions will improve this year when an a $4 million program of capital projects and renovations gets underway.

Paint is peeling off the exterior of Colquitz school and the school will be repainted this summer after other outside work has been completed.

Other costly repairs Colquitz needs will be made this year as part of board approved capital renovations, but some need ministry approval.

Many older schools in need of paint jobs are on the board's list of capital projects.

Stables said he is aware principals are dissatisfied with maintenance.

Principals were asked in early December to state all unfilled maintenance requests, he said.

All the requests are now being processed.

The leaking roof at Willows school has been a problem for some time and administration is waiting for ministry approval before it can be replaced.

Predator Score Tallied

Twenty-four cattle, 14 sheep and one horse have been reported killed by wolves or coyotes in B.C. in the first two months of the moratorium on the use of predator poison.

Twelve wolves have also been killed by shooting or trapping.

Those figures were released today by Environment Minister Rafe Mair who said he wanted to assure livestock producers, conservationists, outdoorsmen and the public that efforts to control predators are being maintained.

He said the livestock losses reported were generally confined to a few individual ranches.

"Every attempt is being made to investigate all complaints within one or two days of their being reported and where predators are confirmed as the cause of damage, controls are being effected," said the minister.

Aerial shooting and trapping with snares are the methods being used to replace poison in predator control, said Mair.

A moratorium was placed on the use of poisons last December.

Mair said Fish and Wildlife Branch officials are keeping a close eye on the situation involving wolves and livestock. He added that surveys are also being undertaken to determine the relationship of wolves to wildlife such as moose, deer, and elk.

Communists Run

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta voters will have another political party to choose from when Premier Peter Lougheed calls a general election.

The Communist Party of Alberta was officially certified as a political party this week and party chairman William Tuomi said his party "will participate fully in the upcoming election."

Lougheed has said the election will be held in the first six months of 1979.

UVic Plan Rapped

Two University of Victoria faculty members are criticizing a plan to bring internationally acclaimed academics to UVic using funds from the sale of the $4.5 million Lansdowne campus to Camosun College.

According to two members of UVic's philosophy department, the academic ranks are overloaded already with senior associate and full professors.

What Uvic needs is more assistant professors and lecturers, say Dr. John Banks and Dr. George Monticone.

The money could be better used to reduce the size of introductory courses, add courses and programs to the university curriculum, increase research funds, or create junior teaching and research positions, Banks and Monticone recommend.

Rape Centre Alters Name to Reflect Scope

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Victoria Rape Relief Centre is changing its name to better reflect the scope of the group's work.

Staff member Rowena Hunnisett said Tuesday the centre is changing its name to the Victoria Rape/Assault Centre.

"We are trying to make it clear that it (the centre) is here for a much broader spectrum of sexual assault," she said.

Hunnisett said many women who have been sexually harassed on the job, for example, feel hesitant about contacting the centre, feeling they have to be raped before they qualify for help from the group.

Another reason for the name change is to remove the word "relief" from the title because, Hunnisett said, it gives the impression of a temporary, band-aid approach to the problem of sexual assault.

"Rape is an expression of this sexually divisive society," she said, and not just an isolated expression of some crazed individual.

For that reason the legal definition of rape has to be broadened, she said.

Hunnisett said the centre had about eight responses to its January newspaper ad campaign asking women who have been sexually harassed by professional people to get in touch with the group.

The centre is conducting a research project into the extent of such sexual assault.

Hunnisett said most of the responses were from women who had been sexually harassed on the job.

Two of the women had been asked by their bosses to go to bed with them. One refused and was fired, the other refused and then quit.

Hunnisett said the responses all came shortly after the ad campaign and accompanying media coverage began and since then nothing much has happened. The centre is considering another advertising effort.

The centre is part of a coalition of five similar groups in B.C., funded primarily by the provincial government but also by grants from local governments and volunteer donations.

The coalition received a $140,000 grant from the B.C. government for the 1978-79 fiscal year, ending March 31. This year the coalition is seeking $170,000, providing more money for salaries and an increase to 12½ paid positions from 11.

The staff people now are paid $900 a month and they want that boosted to $1,000.

The $170,000 is slightly more than half of the coalition's barebones budget of $300,000 for the next fiscal year, Hunnisett said.

The Victoria centre, which has 2½ staff positions, has a budget of $50,000.

Hunnisett said the centre will also be applying to the Greater Victoria Inter-Municipal Committee for some money. The committee gave $2,500 last year but that was just for a six-month period and the group will be seeking a bigger chunk this time to cover the whole 1979-80 fiscal year.

Meanwhile, Federal Health Minister Monique Begin has told the Commons she is considering extending for one year a federal grant to fund an experimental program involving a national assistor of rape crisis centres in Canada.

Begin was responding to NDP MP Stanley Knowles of Winnipeg who said the work of the centres will suffer unless more funds become available by March 31.

RUINS YIELD TWO MORE BODIES

HOPE (CP) — The unidentifiable remains of two bodies were found Tuesday in the smouldering ruins of a 50-unit motel destroyed by fire early Sunday.

One other body was found earlier.

Police earlier identified three persons missing after the fire as Frank Rumley, 28, Georgina Baker, 20, and Arthur Chesterfield, 80.

Rumley was originally from Victoria and Baker from Fort Langley, according to police.

Essential Services Protest Draws 900

More than 900 persons turned out in Nanaimo Tuesday night for a B.C. Federation of Labor rally to protest amendments to provincial essential services legislation.

The rally was the fifth of nine planned by the federation to demonstrate labor's objections to expansion of the Essential Services Disputes Act. Section 11 of the act restricts strike action in schools, municipalities and regional districts and the federation says it effectively removes collective bargaining rights from 34,000 public sector employees in B.C.

Federation president Jim Kinnaird told the rally labor must turn out in strength at the next provincial election to defeat the Social Credit government.

"They clearly showed their hand," Kinnaird said of the present government. "They're out to put us out of business and that's why organized labor has to fight back."

Free collective bargaining rights are guaranteed by the federal government, he said, "and no Social Credit government is going to take it away from us."

Kinnaird also said he wants Premier Bill Bennett to amend his earlier statements that right-to-work legislation would not be introduced at this time.

"The working people want him to stand up and say he will never introduce right-to-work legislation to B.C.," he said.

The rally was the second-largest so far. More than 1,100 persons attended a rally in Nelson Jan. 23.

The federation plans to hold rallies in Prince George, Terrace, Vancouver and Victoria during the next four weeks.

VW Dealers' Hearing Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — A preliminary hearing will begin Feb. 12 in provincial court to determine if there is sufficient evidence to procede with a trial against seven Vancouver-area Volkswagen dealers charged with limiting competition.

The dealers are charged under the Combines Investigation Act with unlawfully conspiring, combining, agreeing or arranging together to prevent or lessen competition in the retail or trade sale of Volkswagen parts between Sept. 1, 1974 and Nov. 1, 1977.

Charged are Volkswagen Pacific Sales and Service Ltd., Wetmore Motors Ltd., Guildford Motors Ltd., Clarkdale Motors Ltd., Capilano Volkswagen Ltd., Westminster Volkswagen Ltd. and Cowell Motors Ltd.

Last week, British Columbia Supreme Court refused an application from the accused that the provincial court had no jurisdiction in the case.

In late 1977, the accused were discharged at a preliminary inquiry into the case in provincial court because the court ruled the Crown was not allowed to call corporate officers to testify.

However the B.C. Court of Appeal later ruled in a separate case that the Crown can call corporate officers, so charges against the car dealers were relaid in provincial court last May.

PWA-Crash Stall Cited; Suit Filed

CALGARY (CP) — A Calgary attorney has launched a suit against Pacific Western Airlines and various other parties in Alberta Supreme Court, saying he's waited long enough for an out-of-court settlement in last year's jet crash at Cranbrook.

Attorney Allan Sattin said he brought action against PWA Monday despite reports the company is making generous and expedient settlements with other claimants in the accident last Feb. 11, which took 43 lives.

At least one of six other Calgary lawyers involved in the claims is also concerned that "nothing is happening," Sattin said.

"I keep hearing these stories of how wonderful PWA's been but I just can't see it," Sattin said. "The company's lawyer Eric Lane has had my material for five months and he's just sitting on it."

The public has been led to believe the crash settlements have been going ahead smoothly and satisfactorily, but that is not the case, he said. Only a few cases have been resolved.

"Lane is claiming there is an agreement among certain defendants that limits his authority to give a claim. But we aren't interested in what happens between the defendants or their worries about liability.

"Lane indicated in a letter that his company won't argue liability. The only argument now is over how much PWA is willing to pay . . . But I'm confident we'll get what we're asking for through the courts."

PWA is among more than a dozen defendants Sattin has named in the case. Among the major defendants are Boeing Corp., which built the 737 jet; Rohr Corp., which manufactured a faulty thrust reverser system; the city of Cranbrook; and the ministry of transport.

Cranbrook and the ministry of transport were implicated in the case because of a communications breakdown between the PWA flight and ground controllers; a snowplow was on the runway when the twin engine jet attempted to land.

Fuel Fraud

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five Vancouver-area fuel truck drivers have been charged with fraud, theft and possession of stolen property following a five-month police investigation.

A spokesman for the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit said Tuesday numerous commercial accounts of Morrow Fuel Oil Sales Ltd., of nearby Burnaby, were shorted and the oil sold without the company's knowledge.

Police were alerted about the operation following an investigation into the disappearance of 37 tons of steel rods worth about $13,000.

Keith Dixon Binns of Burnaby was charged with four counts each of fraud, theft and possession of stolen property.

Lorne Edward Boone and William James McNeil, both of Burnaby, Robert Eugene Drycose of Delta, and Anthony Frank Hurt of Richmond, were each charged with one count of fraud, theft and possession of stolen property.

All five will appear in provincial court March 23.

Binns and Gary Pierce, also of Vancouver, were charged with possession of stolen property. They will appear in Burnaby provincial court Feb. 19.

The steel was recovered in raids in Haney, Burnaby and North Vancouver Dec. 31.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A tractor-trailer truck carrying explosives burst into flames Tuesday following a traffic accident on the snowbound Highway 97, about 160 kilometres north of here.

GIBRALTAR STRIKE FINALLY OVER

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Workers at the Gibraltar copper mine voted 83 per cent in favor of a new one-year contract Tuesday night, ending a eight-month strike-lockout.

The contract, worked out with the assistance of Labor Minister Allan Williams, gives the workers, members of Local 18 of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, a 13-per-cent wage increase.

Fifty-four union members voted on the contract offer. There were originally 450 workers at the copper mine when the dispute began.

Some key outstanding issues will be sent to an industrial inquiry commission, including discipline of union members, seniority and maintenance of union membership.

Local 18 president Don Nolan said the union made some major gains with the agreement, adding that if it was not for the work of the labor minister, the dispute would not have been settled.

The mine had been closed since May 26. Nolan said a return to work will begin today.

'CON MAN' DUCKS JAIL

one for $2,194 for airline tickets to Stuttgart and return.

The next day, Barlow obtained possession of a 1978 Porsche from Speedway Motors using a $28,569 worthless cheque. Court was told Tuesday Barlow traded the car later for $4,700 cash and received another Porsche from a dealer near Boston.

On April 8, Barlow wrote a worthless cheque for $2,850 on a Westcoast Sayings account to pay for U.S. travellers cheques.

The fourth offence occurred Nov. 6 when a worthless cheque for $2,162 was given the Vancouver store for four wheels and tires for a Porsche. They were later sold for $1,200.

Cashman noted that Barlow has an extensive criminal record and on numerous cases had been charged with similar offences. The previous sentences totalled 13 years jail.

The offences included 16 false pretences, four matters related to forged documents, three thefts, and uttering, forgery and fraud.

The judge reviewed the testimony of several character witnesses who spoke favorably of Barlow and two reports from a psychologist who concluded the businessman has a personality trait or character flaw in which he is unable to maintain emotional equilibrium while under stress.

(Wilson told the court Monday the offences began when Barlow's financial world fell apart.)

Barlow had invited arrest by passing bad cheques in his company's name but he was not a criminal in the usual manner in that he did not earn a livelihood from crime and he was not a violent person.

"I think society is best served if he is kept in the community under supervision and arrangements are made for restitution," he said.

The results to date of jail sentences, said the judge, show that method of dealing with Barlow is a failure.

Cashman said it is obvious that jail has not been a deterrent to Barlow in the past and deterrence of others was only one of many considerations. He was not at all convinced that sentencing one person to jail deters another. Every case had to be decided on its own facts and circumstances.

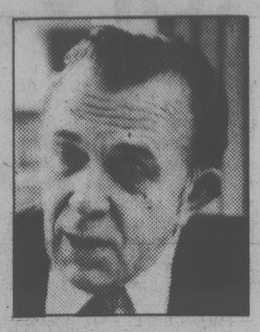
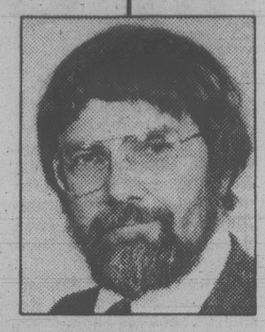
New Driving Range in the Rough And Facing Tricky Recovery Shot



Ald. John Mika says the driving range problems back up his call for a master plan on recreation.



Ald. Geoff Vantreight has been handed the job of drumming up more business for struggling range.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich municipality's new golf driving range isn't — so far, at least — a thriving rang[illegible]

The recreational facility on the municipally-owned Cedar Hill golf course, which allows golfers to practise their swing under cover, stands deserted much of the time.

Built last year at a cost of $250,000 (with the assistance of a $86,666 grant from the provincial government), the range has earned only about $7,700 in revenue in the seven months since it opened July 10.

Officials say that translates to about 3,800 customers.

Recently Ald. Sandy Noel was so concerned about the poor use of the range he proposed cutting the rates in half. But he hastily changed his mind after protests of unfair competition from owners of private driving ranges.

Meanwhile, critics have said publicly that the entire project was ill-conceived, badly designed and unnecessary.

They claim the range isn't long enough or wide enough, its fences should have been higher and the range should not have been built facing into the prevailing westerly gales.

But Mayor Mel Couvelier and parks and recreation director Bill Young say they are not the least bit pessimistic and that the new facility should be allowed time to prove itself.

Couvelier dismissed fears that the driving range could turn out to be a white elephant, although he was careful to point out that the decision to proceed with the project was taken by a previous council.

He explained that the proposal orginated from a now-defunct ad hoc group called the Cedar Hill golf course committee, consisting of aldermen and some golf club members.

"That had the effect of removing staff from direct responsibility," he said. "When the committee itself got involved this became one of those group-decision deals in which no one feels responsible."

Couvelier said he believes the decision to provide the driving range was basically right but he is unhappy with the way the facility was designed and its present use.

However, he said he has asked Ald. Geoff Vantreight, the newly-appointed parks and recreation committee chairman, to examine the problem and produce some recommendations for stimulating better patronage.

Recreation director Bill Young is confident the driving range will attract customers as the weather improves.

"Almost no one thinks about golf in the middle of winter," he says, "but sure as spring arrives it brings out the golfers by the score.

"I will be concerned if it isn't the busiest place in town by the time April and May roll around."

Vantreight echoed his comments, noting that of the course's 700-plus regular users only about 40 play all winter long.

In better weather as the course becomes congested the driving range will come into its own, he believes, because golfers waiting for a game will pass the time by "driving a few buckets of balls."

Ald. John Mika, who complained last year about the costly "enrichment" of facilities at the course, said the driving range situation points up again the need for a comprehensive master plan on recreation.

"My concern was that, faced with all kinds of recreational needs for the people of Saanich, we were concentrating too much on golf without any documentation that that was where the money was needed," he said.

"I was not opposed to golf per se, but to the fact that money was being spent there without any adequate consideration or survey of the global needs of the municipality."

Mika said the impetus for the Cedar Hill improvements — including a $120,000 addition to the clubhouse — came largely from an ad hoc committee "loaded with aldermen who are devoted golfers."

Curtis Knocks UVic Over Maltwood Sale

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis has told the University of Victoria he disapproves of its plans to sell the Maltwood Estate in Royal Oak.

In a strongly-worded letter to UVic President Howard Petch, Curtis said many Greater Victoria residents feel the estate has a historical significance and predicted the sale would have a negative impact on the community.

Curtis said he is disappointed with the university's attitude toward the six-acre property.

"I'm greatly distressed by the intention of the university to sell property which it so enthusiastically received just a few years ago."

Petch wrote to Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier asking if Saanich would be interested in acquiring the property for municipal purposes.

If Saanich declines it will probably be put on the open market, he said.

UVic wants to sell or rent the property and use the money to enhance its Maltwood collection, now in the new University Centre on campus.

Curtis said although the buildings and site are not classified heritage, they are considered by many with a strong attachment to Greater Victoria to have a special significance, Curtis said in his letter.

"Knowing of your desire to continue to improve relations between the university and the community this decision can't help but have a very negative impact on that relationship," the letter stated.

Curtis suggested during a meeting with Petch that UVic offer the estate to Saanich.

Petch said no sale price has been placed on the estate.

Q. How are squirrels caught and how many does it take to make a fur coat? P.C.

A. A local furrier says squirrels are mostly shot through the head with 22 bullets by Indians. Depending on the style and the amount of fur required, it takes somewhere between 225 and 250 pelts to make a fur coat.

Petty Games Played On Marina — Wright

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

North Saanich Mayor George Westwood isn't telling the whole story in defending his rejection of a housing and marina development at Tsehum Harbor, developer Bob Wright said today.

Wright took issue with Westwood's claim that if council had accepted the proposal it would have meant a development resulting in a density of eight houses per acre instead of two as permitted under present zoning.

"He knows that's not true," Wright said. "Our starting point was six units an acre . . . and we were prepared to go with even less."

Wright accused Westwood of "petty political gamesmanship" in blocking the development proposal which was approved in principle by the advisory planning commission and municipal planner.

He said that because of Westwood's attitude, the municipality now stands to lose 12 to 13 acres including nearly a mile of shorefront which Wright was prepared to donate if his proposal to expand Bosun's Marina and build a cluster-housing development was allowed.

"Now I'm afraid that deal is dead as long as George Westwood is mayor," Wright said. "It would be a waste of time even discussing it with North Saanich council."

Wright said it is ironic that if his proposal had been accepted the number of houses would have been less than the number permitted under the present zoning.

Twenty-two acres of the 37-acre parcel are zoned for single-family residences on half-acre lots, thus allowing a maximum of 44 houses.

His proposal would have involved building a maximum of 40 units in a cluster setting on about six or seven acres.

Wright said he would have dropped that to a maximum of 20 units if council had insisted.

"The housing development has always been secondary," he said. "Our primary interest is expanding the marina to make it more economical."

Wright said there is no doubt in his mind Westwood has stacked the APC with supporters, an accusation which Westwood has denied.

However, this week former APC chairman Adrien Gilmore said he would not stand for re-election because of council's selection of commission members. He charged political interference by Westwood and council.

Wright said he has no other option but to go ahead with development plans for the 22-acre section as allowed by zoning.

He said he will go to the provincial land commission within the next 30 days to petition removal of the property from the agricultural land reserve.

He said he expects a favorable decision as tests indicate the soil is unsuitable for farming.

However, Westwood has vowed to try to block any development on the site.

Said Wright: "The battle is far from over."

Repairs Okayed For Icebreaker

The icebreaker Camsell, holed by Arctic ice Sept. 11, will be repaired.

H.O. Buchanan, the department of transport's regional director for marine services in Vancouver, said today results of a $50,000 study by Westinghouse on repairs needed in the engine room are encouraging enough to order a go-ahead.

He expected tenders to be called in early April.

Meanwhile, the federal treasury board has approved funds for chartering an offshore vessel to carry out servicing of large navigational buoys and other duties normally done by Camsell in March and April.

Still Chance For Library After Meeting

The possibility of a new central library is still alive following a meeting between Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis and mayors for the four core municipalities.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young said today the discussions were positive and he feels the provincial government will come up with the financing that's needed to make the move possible.

Young said the mayors reaffirmed their position on the matter and it's now up to the province to either come up with a start-up grant of $400,000 or see the library remain in its Yates Street building.

"Everybody agrees that it (the building now available on Broughton) would be the best possible prospect for Greater Victoria and nobody want to see it slip by," said Young.

He added the mayors made it clear to Curtis there is no way the municipalities will change their position on the need for a substantial grant.

"We just haven't got the capability of taking it back for another go-round."

LAWYER TO LEAD LIBRARY

City lawyer Michael Whittaker, 37, was elected chairman of the Greater Victoria Library Board on Tuesday.

Whittaker, who succeeds Gordon Hutcheson, beat out Ald. Shirley Dowell of Oak Bay.

Ald. Larry Mann of Esquimalt was elected vice-chairman, replacing Dowell who had held that position for four years.

Okay, That's It! Time for LBT

max low

For some time it's been lurking near the borders of our minds, I know.

But it took that story the other day of the teen-aged girl who shot the principal and custodian of a school to death to make us cross over: we're starting our own Let's Boycott Television campaign.

We — the adults at our place (being the only ones who get a vote) — have decided to unplug our set ceremoniously on March 1 and put it away somewhere well out of sight for a six-month trial period. After that time we will decide either that we are dotty without it and must have it back, or that it has gone to stay.

Once before, a few years ago, we did this quite accidentally. Our set broke down and when I took it in to be repaired I noticed that after the first week everyone stopped asking when it was coming back. So I didn't bother to pick it up for five months.

Now, having been brought up in New Zealand in the days of radio only, we weren't ingrained with television. We watch very little at our place, actually. But still, what you do watch becomes addictive and must have an effect on the young and growing.

"Television is a very seductive thing," says a friend of mine who has just sold his set and vows to live without it. And you know, he's right for it lures you into watching all sorts of rubbish and almost dictates that you sip more beers and nibble more tidbits than you would otherwise. In all honesty, do you munch as much while reading a good book? Of course you don't.

Perhaps it wouldn't have seemed so bad if that teenager in San Diego had shot the principal because her marks were bad. But the thought that she admits getting the idea from TV shows like S.W.A.T. which she watches regularly is a little too close to home.

It is not hard to see the effect seemingly harmless shows have on your own children.

My three youngsters love to watch CHiPs, which is about a couple of nice friendly California Highway Patrol officers who ride around on motorcycles helping people and even stopping to do little things like show kids the right way (and place) to skateboard so they won't get run over. But even that has violence and a lot of high-speed car and bike chases that I'm sure sow the seeds for many of the incidents that blossom on our highways.

When it ends, my seven-year-old son Jason's eyes mirror the action and with his hands he revs up his imaginary throttles and races around the living room (on his feet, of course) crashing into everything.

But what gets me is the Incredible Hulk, that mild-mannered man who turns into a monster. Though he, too, always ends up doing good (what else) and helping someone, I'm not sure I can stand much longer the sight of a son literally turning green, making with that awful face and overturning the furniture . . .

Another one they like is Chopper Squad, a fairly slick crime show filmed in Australia and portraying the vital air-sea rescue service on the coast of New South Wales. But it, too, can be violent with guns used and land and water chases involved. That's the thing about television — everyone seems to be chasing someone. No one ever stays still.

Then there's all those ads which come at you again and again until they are printed on your brain and turning the set off doesn't help because your kids wander around singing the jingles.

I swear if I have to listen to those ridiculous women say 'it does a lot for you, uh huh, a lot' one more time, I will place my foot through the screen.

So you can see, I'm rapidly reaching the stage where I need release from the hypnotic hold.

And who knows, perhaps my Let's Boycott Television movement will grow.

Maybe you'll tell two friends and they'll tell two friends and so on and so on . . .

Fists, Words Fly In Cougar Victory

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

A form of mutual admiration has existed between Victoria Cougars and New Westminster, the Western Hockey League rivals juggling for control of second place in the Western Division.

It has been peace, or thereabouts, while the rivals, showing some respect for each other, have concentrated on hard-hitting and entertaining hockey.

But after Victoria's 5-2 victory over the Bruins at Memorial Arena on Tuesday, New Westminster coach Ernie McLean said he "wouldn't be surprised" if "open hostility" shows the next time the teams meet.

Which, as it happens, would be Saturday, at Memorial Arena.

McLean blamed referee Rob Schick and some of Victoria's players for permitting hostility, 80 minutes' worth, to show Tuesday. The Bruins totalled 43 minutes, the Cougars 37. Each team drew three, five-minute fighting penalties.

"You saw the game," said the fuming McLean. "We spent all night killing penalties because of that guy (Schick). The Cougars were pretty good with their sticks but wouldn't drop them and my guys aren't going to continue taking that kind of guff."

Fiddlesticks, retorted Victoria coach Jack Shupe, when informed of McLean's charges. "If anything, I thought the Bruins got all the breaks in officiating.

"(Bruin defenceman Boris) Fistric holds (Victoria defenceman Tony) Feltrin, and it was Feltrin who drew a penalty . . .(New Westminster winger Dave) Orleski comes off the bench and jumps (Cougar winger Greg) Adams from behind while Greg is jawing with another Bruin, but both guys get major penalties.

"McLean is upset because his team was beaten soundly by a better one."

The partisans among the 2,281 fans would probably side with Shupe.

Schick, while skating well and generally in control, did not score a goal that mattered one way or the other. There was leniency both ways in his whistle-blowing.

The Cougars scored three of their five goals on power-play situations, the Bruins one but the simple truth is the Cougars were worthy winners. They skated strongly, hit effectively, were always in command and only the work of New Westminster goaltender Richard Martens prevented the Cougars from recording a more one-sided victory.

Cougars, scoring their first home victory since defeating the Bruins here back on Dec. 16, out-shot New Westminster 46-22. Even the two Bruin goals flattered New Westminster. Both came on almost identical plays, rebounds from point shots, because John Ogrodnick happened to be in the right place at the right time.

Defenceman Scott Lang, rebounding from a medicore perfomance Saturday when he was on the ice for all rivals goals in a 4-4 tie with Billings Bighorns, got credit for two Victoria goals while Barry Pederson, Gary Lupul and Bob Smith added singles.

Actually, Lang scored only one goal. His second was tipped in by winger Greg Adams and Schick, although informed, neglected to make a change after the game. Still, Lang was deserving of two points and then some.

Along with Mark Robinson, Tony Feltrin and Todd Morton, Lang played strongly and led the defensive corps in hitting, the body-checking tactic that reduced New Westminster's attacking efficiency all night.

The victory, improving Victoria's seasonal won-lost record to 7-4 over the Bruins, lifted the Cougars to within four points of second place. Cougars play Calgary Wranglers, losers of only one of their last 12 games, here Thursday and then go back against the Bruins, as mentioned, on Saturday.

In Tuesday's only other game, Lethbridge Broncos scored four times in the final period to score an 8-4 victory over Medicine Hat Tigers.

Dedication, Attitude The Pierce Attributes

Glen Pierce is 37, still blows up a storm of cigarette smoke, is some 30 pounds lighter than when he last played on the Island in a Pacific Coast Curling Association championship and, most important, is only one step away from his life's ambition — to win a berth from B.C. in the Macdonald Brier Canadian curling championship which this year will be played in Ottawa, March 4-10.

It's been a long haul for Pierce, one of B.C.'s premier curlers through the years, but never able to crack the big one, the PCCA championship, which carries with it that chance in the provincial and then the Brier.

Seven times he has been in the PCCA finals. Five times he had been a runner-up before last Sunday and then he saw it all come true. He got by a nemesis, Bernie Sparkes, with a big three in the final end when Sparkes was the one who bowed to the pressure, drifting through the house twice.

Pierce then was an easy winner in the final as the Ivan Carlisle rink became unglued in the crucial eighth end and that was all Pierce needed. But that's pressure and he had the experience to stand it. Carlisle may do later on. Pierce had weathered a few previous storms in fine fashion and gave full marks to his rink, and rightly so. "I just asked them to keep me in the game until I could find the ice," he said after the opening draw when he had missed on five successive ends. "And they did."

His rink upheld him afterwards too as Pierce wasn't the most consistent skip in the competition and had to win five games in a row to get there. But, once he saw daylight, he wasn't about to be denied.

He has a new rink this year, but that's been his trademark. He changes from time to time. He calls it dedication. He once said: "It's a matter of attitude," and, if that covers a multitude of sins, he prefers to leave it that way.

As it is, this year "everything has worked out well," he said, as confirmed by the fact that he leads the Vancouver Super League. He took the blame alone for his opening draw defeat by Sparkes and, in the final analysis, said it was his rink's consistent play which had won the title and they deserved all the credit.

It was back in 1969 that Pierce got his first runner-up tray. The next two came in 1971 and '72, the fourth at Nanaimo in '73 and a fifth in '74.

He has had several different combinations in his time and several fine curlers as teammates too — Jack Tucker, Des Deroche, Lynn Mason, Croft Bain, Brian Chadwick, Ken Schisler, Ron Miki, Bert Gretzinger — to drop a few names.

And this year it is all new again with Wayne Matthewson, a strong third in the PCCA finals, second Bruce Davey, a doctor by profession but hyper on the ice, and Fuji Miki, at lead. With them, it has all clicked — for that Super League lead, the Totem championship, and now the PCCA title.

And it could be that one of his former thirds, Gretzinger, may be the one he has to fear as he bids for that national berth. Gretzinger is favored from the B.C. Curling Association bonspiel which is being played this week and it was Gretzinger who gave Sparkes a close battle in Vancouver last year before Bernie won out.

Still, it is Glen's finest hour and, about his dedication, his wife says: "He curls all night."

Don't they all?

And one who has also done so for many years was honored at Duncan on Sunday.

Glen Harper received a life membership in the Pacific Coast Curling Association from PCCA president Wally M'Lot of Delta. Glen's list of credentials is lengthy indeed, as all curlers know; and besides his strong club affiliations — it is said that he knowingly has never missed a meeting in any capacity — he also is competitive to the extent that he has been to four national finals, twice to the Brier and twice to the Mixed. Nobody can match that on the Island and few in the province.

The honor was well deserved and Glen closes out another of his duties this year when he oversees the Canadian Mixed at Prince George after assisting with the provincials at the Racquet Club next week, of course.

And, if you want a quick preview before the Island reps are decided this weekend, that's easy.

Sparkes and Pierce start all over again here. Sparkes won the Vancouver zone playoff and Pierce the Fraser Valley.

It should be a good weekend.

In the only other game, Edmonton Oilers defeated visiting Birmingham Bulls, 6-2.

SPARKES SWEEPS WOMEN'S PLAYOFF

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — Lindsay Sparkes and her North Vancouver rink completed a sweep of the British Columbia women's curling championship Tuesday with their seventh consecutive victory.

Sparkes defeated Ruth Trickey of Penticton 7-3 to finish with a perfect 7-0 record in the round-robin competition at McPherson Winter Club.

Sparkes, who won the 1976 Canadian women's championship while curling under her maiden name of Davies, advances to the Canadian women's championship in Montreal, beginning Feb. 24.

The rink, with Dawn Knowles the vice-skip, Robin Wilson second and Lorraine Bowles at lead, curls out of the North Shore Winter Club.

Diane Burton of Duncan, the Vancouver Island champion, lost her final game to Marlene Newbauer of Haney 8-6 to finish with a 2-5 record.

Terry's Tally Salvages Tie

Terry Coughlin scored the lone goal of the third period at 1:34 to give Juan de Fuca Gulls a 3-3 tie Tuesday with first-place Saanich Braves in a Patterson Division game of the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League at Pearkes Arena.

Rick Milligan and Ron Hope scored the other Juan de Fuca goals while Scott Connors (2) and Steve Craig connected for division-leading Braves.

Kings Take First Game

HULL, Que. — Victoria Kiwanis Kings tripped Hull 5-2 Tuesday in the opening round of a 30-team midget hockey tournament.

Kings meet Kingston in their next game Friday.

WARREN GILES DIES AT 82

CINCINNATI (AP) — Warren Giles, former president of baseball's National League, died in hospital today at the age of 82.

His son, Bill Giles, said earlier this week that his father was suffering from cancer.

Giles served as president of the National League for 18 years until his retirement in 1969. He was general manager of Cincinnati Reds from 1936-1951.

SABRES ACQUIRE SCHULTZ

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins have traded winger Dave Schultz, 29, to Buffalo Sabres for winger Gary McAdam, 23.

The trade takes Schultz to his fourth National Hockeu League club. He started in Philadelphia, was traded to Los Angeles and Pittsburgh acquired him in a four-player deal in 1977.

Sinden Is Impressed By Soviet Size, Speed

NEW YORK (CP) — They sat together a few rows back watching 22 Soviet players scrambling for the puck during practice.

Bill Torrey, Harry Sinden and Cliff Fletcher form the managerial braintrust of Team NHL, preparing for the first Challenge Cup series against the Soviet national squad starting Thursday night.

Some observers thought the Soviets were playing a version of the old game of bandy. "Putting all the players on the ice that way is common," Sinden says. "A lot of NHL teams do that too."

For Sinden, watching Soviet teams is old stuff. Actually, they don't show you much in practice, says the managing director of Boston Bruins.

"But they seem to have more fun than they did 20 years ago when I first saw them. However, their practices have changed very little in 20 years."

Sinden looked at the heights and weights listed for the Soviets and felt they might be on the short end of the chart. "They look like a very big team to me. They also have a lot of speed.

"I think it looks like a very close series, low-scoring games," Sinden said. "I feel that we'll come out on the long end of every game but it will be very tough."

Team NHL is relatively younger than some of the NHL teams that played the Soviets in the past.

Sinden feels that with all the excellent young legs and good goaltending, the all-stars will win the three-game series. The second game is scheduled Saturday afternoon with the third on Sunday night.

What bothers Sinden, all-star coach Scotty Bowman and assistant Claude Ruel a little bit is the lack of depth in experience among the defencemen.

Torrey plans to go with 15 forwards, seven defencemen and three goalies for the series.

Sinden thinks all-star defenceman Denis Potvin of New York Islanders is going to be all right after separating his shoulder two weeks ago. But Potvin may sit out the first game.

Young players like Barry Beck of Colorado Rockies, Bob Picard of Washington Capitals and Ron Greschner of New York Rangers may lack international hockey experience.

But Sinden believes that since they are top players in the NHL they should do all right.

The Soviet line that really impresses Sinden is the one centred by Viktor Zhluktov with Sergei Kapustin and Helmut Balderis on the wings.

"They have tremendous acceleration and good combination play," says Sinden.

"And they're good size.

Left winger Don Marcotte of the Bruins played in Tuesday's practice session with Swedish stars Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg of the Rangers.

"Marcotte will be a godsend to them because they'll be able to freewheel all night with Donny out there," Sinden says.

Marcotte and Bob Gainey of Montreal probably are the two premier defensive forwards in the league.

"We looked at the Soviet lineup and every one of their lines is good. So Scotty feels that he can't put a line together that doesn't have a pretty good defence on it."

"And that's his thinking with Gainey on one line, perhaps Marcotte on another, Billy Barber and Bobby Clarke of the Flyers on another.

"Gil Perreault of Buffalo paired with Clarke and Barber would add depth."

Then there's the combination of Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles Kings with Guy Lafleur and Steve Shutt of the Canadiens.

"That's a potent line," Sinden notes. "I think that any line that Guy Lafleur plays on is going to get many chances to score because he's probably the best playmaking forward in the league for many years.

TO ORR FROM SOVIETS: A WARM 'THANK YOU'

NEW YORK (CP) — The Soviet Union gave Bobby Orr a warm "thank you" for what he's done for hockey and joined the National Hockey League in honoring him on Tuesday.

Orr won the Lester Patrick Award for 1979, named after the late general manager and coach of New York Rangers. But he got a lot more than the trophy at a luncheon in his honor.

There was a special Russian bear trophy from the Sovit Union and a statuette from the NHL that also will be given to the members of team NHL which meets the Soviet national team in the Challenge Cup Series starting Thursday night.

Valentine Sych, deputy chairman of the Soviet Sport Committee, told the luncheon that it was a shame that Orr couldn't play in the Challenge Cup.

He had the intelligence, skill and strength of a great player, Sych said.

"Thank you, Bobby Orr, for making hockey what it is today as one of the most popu lar of sports."

Orr, who retired as an active player with Chicago Black Hawks last Nov. 8, was given the Patrick Award for his contribution to hockey in the United States, particularly during the 10 years he starred with Boston Bruins.

"I have no regrets about leaving active play," Orr said in an interview. "I get paid well for something I love to do — travel and meet people. I have no reason to complain. It just happens that I have one of those knees."

"No other athlete ever dominated a sport as much as Bobby Orr did," said NHL president John Ziegler.

A Bonanza for Players Is Red Ink for Owners

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Super Bowl was a bonanza for the players of the winning Pittsburgh Steelers and even the losing Dallas Cowboys, but it was a financial bust for the owners of both National Football League teams.

"Our expenses were well into six figures," said Steeler publicist Joe Gordon. "The league gives you into six figures for expenses, but it's not nearly enough."

Precise figures are the private affair of the Rooney family, the team owners, Gordon said.

"We won't be specific, but we'll tell you we lost plenty. We lost. Any team does."

Dallas Cowboys were a little more specific about their debt, saying the red ink ran to at least $100,000.

"As far as the bottom line of our profit and loss statement, it would have been more favorable if we hadn't entered the playoffs," Cowboys president Tex Schramm said before his team was beaten 35-31.

The financial setbacks this year came despite a record $6 million in television advertising revenue. That money was divided among the league's 28 teams.

Participating teams have yet to sound the first real complaint.

"When going to the Super Bowl, we cannot be concerned about the expense because this is what everyone in our organization is striving for," said Steeler president Dan Rooney.

"Success is measured by winning. We have done and will continue to do everything possible to be successful," Rooney said.

That means spending more than the team makes trying to become champions.

For the players, however, the rewards from personal appearances and product endorsements are tangible and sizeable.

"It's possible that a player could realize something into six figures during the entire off-season."

Off-season earnings are only part of the story. Each of the 45 Steeler players got $18,000 as members of the winning Super Bowl team. Each Dallas player got $9,000.

There was also $5,000 for each Steeler for getting past the Denver Broncos in the first round of the American Football Conference playoffs and $9,000 for beating the Houston Oilers for the AFC title.

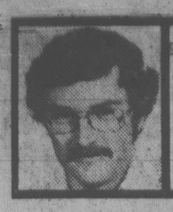
Wildlife Plan Good Starting Point



OUTDOORS
stewart lang

All the bases appear to be covered by the Proposed Wildlife Management Plan for British Columbia.

The plan, announced last week, is just one part of a multi-faceted process which will form the basis for wildlife management at the grassroots level throughout the province.

And you, the public, will have a say in the final version of all documents.

In addition to the over-all plan, individual plans are being prepared by the Fish and Wildlife Branch on a species (or groups of related species) basis for the entire province.

At the same time, regional management plans are being drafted for each of the seven regions. These will form a program structure for regional implementation of objectives derived at the provincial level.

Individual area plans, complimenting the regional plan, will be drawn up for areas having particularly high wildlife values or where the region "has to react to competing resource uses that threaten a highly valued species or critical habitat."

Provincial and regional plans will be updated at five-year intervals and the individual area plans will be revised when necessary.

The over-all plan specifically outlines the philosophy, policy, problems and objectives of wildlife management in this province.

The plan points out:

"The main wildlife feature which sets B.C. apart from most other jurisdictions in North America is its variety and abundance of large land mammals.

"Of the 32 major species or subspecies of large mammals native to Canada, three-quarters occur in B.C. Moreover, the B.C. populations of a number of these species, such as the California bighorn sheep, stone sheep, mountain goat and cougar are probably the largest in the world.

"Such a unique resource offers many opportunities for management to accommodate public use. It also places a responsibility on British Columbians to conserve what is truly a natural hertiage of international importance."

Unfortunately, as the plan [illegible] and water base on which wildlife depends is primarily under the legislative control of other provincial agencies.

The plan also outlines several major constraints that will influence both the speed and degree in which the management objectives are met.

Included in the list are an inability to obtain highly accurate census data because of geographical limitations, major industrial and urban development, a lack of specific technical knowledge, government policy, manpower, funding and conflicting public demands.

The plan, in addition to regular game animals, takes into account threatened and endangered species, furbearing animals, small non-game mammals, raptors, non-game birds, reptiles and amphibians.

At the end of the proposed plan is a questionnaire and, thoughtfully, a stamped envelope. Individuals and groups are encouraged to submit ideas, either through the questionnaire or by a more extensive written submission. In addition, a series of public meetings in each of the regions is planned for the spring.

Following the meetings and after a thorough review of the written submissions, a final plan will be drafted to provide the framework for wildlife management in this province.

Copies of the proposed plan may be obtained from any regional office of the branch or by writing to the Fish and Wildlife Branch, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C.

Duran Seeks Welter Title

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Roberto Duran, who has dominated the lightweight division in the 1970s, has renounced the World Boxing Council championship because of weight problems and will campaign for the welterweight title.

Known as Hands of Stone for his punching power, Duran held the World Boxing Association lightweight title for five years before the WBC also recognized him when he defeated Puerto Rico's Esteban De Jesus last year. Duran's record is 64-1-0.

It Wasn't Always Easy Says Keegan of Move

LONDON (Reuter) — Kevin Keegan, European soccer player of the year in 1978, said Tuesday that his first 12 months with West German club SV Hamburg had been the most difficult year of his life.

Keegan left England's European champion Liverpool in 1977 to seek his fame and fortune on the continent, but there were times when he thought he had made a terrible mistake.

"Playing outside your own country makes or breaks a player," he said. "I don't think it matters how much ability you have. In the end it depends on how strong your character is. There were times when I wanted to quit but I knew I had to keep battling through."

When Keegan left Liverpool he was an idol of the fans and he realized he was risking everything by move to West Germany.

"The fans in Hamburg have been terrific," he said. "I honestly think if it had not been for their tremendous support I would not have stayed."

Keegan, in England to play for his country today in a vital European championship Group 1 match against Northern Ireland, said he was sure that playing in West Germany has improved his international performances.

Keegan, who recently signed a new contract with Hamburg, said he does not have any plans to return to English League soccer.

"I said when I left that the only team I would come back to would be Liverpool. They are the best team in Britain."

Keegan has been linked with Spain's Real Madrid which was prepared to offer more than $2 million for the England striker.

"I shall be 28 next week and there are things in life more important than money. My wife and family are happy in West Germany and the club allows my release to play for England which is important. I can't say I will never move but at the moment I am perfectly happy."

Test Victory

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — Effective spin bowling by Pakistan's Mushtaq Mohammad and Wasim Bari gave the visiting cricketers a victory over New Zealand in their opening test match Wednesday. New Zealand, needing a second-innings score of 305 for victory, was bowled out for 176.

CANADIAN VICTORY

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Canada's national men's volleyball team scored a 3-1 win Tuesday night over the United States national team.

Rain Halts Test

KANPUR, India (CP) — Rain washed out play Wednesday in the sixth Test Match between India and the West Indies, making a draw virtually certain with one day's play remaining.

Totems Top Spartans; Panthers Rip Dockers

Victoria Totems exploded in the second half to snap a 36-36 half-time deadlock and trip Claremont Spartans 92-68 in a Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League game Tuesday.

In other games, Oak Bay Bays defeated Stelly's 60-45, Parkland Panthers shelled Esquimalt Dockers 95-47, Mt. Douglas Rams bounced Spectrum 89-44 and Belmont Braves downed Dunsmuir Demons, 87-55.

Darren Alexander led the Totem attack with 28 points and Wayne Russell added 23. Mike Smith (23) and Walt Phillips (21) led Spartans.

Bays, who were only ahead 44-41 going into the final quarter, swept to victory behind the 27-point effort of Wayne Andrews. Dan Barney was the top Stelly's marksman with 18.

Panthers — as usual — were sparked by the prolific combination of Quinn Groenhyde (30) and Greg Wiltjer (20) while Mike Barber sank 21 to top Dockers.

Russ Mosher set the pace for Rams with 26 points and Vince Cullen counted 17. Steve Newman (14) was the leading light for Spectrum.

Tom Raine and Vince Tuele each sank 18 points to lead the Belmont attack while Dean St. Pierre was best for Demons with 22.

In Greater Victoria High School Girls' League play, Oak Bay topped Stelly's 57-32 and Parkland dropped Esquimalt, 44-24.

Sandy Smith set the pace for Oak Bay with 14 points and Bonnie Bains was tops for Stelly's with 10.

Louise Allen fired 19 points to spark Parkland, which led 25-11 at half time.

Bully for Roosevelt (and Other Academy-List Losers)

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Scott's World

HOLLYWOOD — Exactly 204 feature length motion pictures qualify for Academy Awards this year, including The Secret Life of Plants, Starlets For Sale and The Incredible Melting Man, none of which has a prayer.

But the Motion Picture Academy, dedicated as always to fair play and artistic excellence, lists this trio of brodies in its annual "Reminder List of Eligible Releases" in the event that members may choose to vote for any or all of them.

This dandy little pamphlet is mailed to academy members to allow voters to refresh their memories of films and performers of 1978.

The Secret Life of Plants is not listed under documentaries or short subjects, so members are left to reflect on just what this picture is all about. There is, of course, no cast listed.

On the other hand one may wish the cast of Starlets For Sale had not been provided. It stars Ti Ai, Ping-Chang Pan, Yin-Yin Shaw and Yung Yu. Clearly, this is not an American film but the pamphlet doesn't signify its origin.

Then there's The Incredible Melting Man starring Alex Rebar, Burr DeBenning and Myron Healey. Chances are good this film reached its zenith by making the eligible list. It will get no closer to an Oscar should hell freeze over.

Many countries are represented on the list, including Senegal, Brazil, Mexico, Greece and other world centres of the film art.

Among Hollywood filmmakers Universal was preeminent with 22 qualifiers, followed by 16 for Warner Bros. and Paramount and United Artists with 15 each.

The shortest cast of the years, excepting The Secret Life of Plants, of course, was Bully! James Whitmore's one-man show of Teddy Roosevelt.

Coming Home, which may collects Oscars for best picture, best actor (Jon Voight) and best actress (Jane Fonda) lists 135 cast members.

Some of the listings pique curiosity if not a burning desire to see the films. For instance The Alaska Story. A remake of Nanook of the North? A story of Russian perfidy in the whaling grounds? An Eskimo love story perhaps?

One's curiosity is not satisfied by scrutinizing the cast of The Alaska Story: Kinya Kitaoji, Kyoko Mitsubayashi, Eji Okada and a couple of guys named Tom Carter and Charles Brewer.

Some titles obscure the content of movies. There were almost a dozen films in 1978 which could have misled animal lovers, for instance, to see the following:

The Bad News Bears Go to Japan, Silver Bears, Comes a Horseman, The Deer Hunter, Here Come the Tigers, Stingray, National Lampoon's Animal House, Rabbit Test, Revenge of the Pink Panther and The Wild Geese.

None was remotely concerned with the animals themselves.

Other movie titles overtly advertise the film genre. Once such is Captain Lust & Pirate Women which, based on its title, might merit an "X" rating, thus making it ineligible for Academy consideration.

Madness was a popular subject in Asia this year. Hsui-Hsien and Chen-Chi Lin headed the cast of The Mad Love Chase. The Mad Monk featured Feng Yeh and Yin-Yin Shaw (who, you will remember, also starred in Starlets for Sale). And The Mad Monk Strikes Again with Ping Hsia added to the cast.

Of course, the academy also lists all the movies which have genuine claims to Academy Awards: Midnight Express, Superman, Heaven Can Wait, The Boys From Brazil, The Deer Hunter, Grease and An Unmarried Woman among others.

But a scan of the eligible films turns up some familiar star names in pictures that hardly saw the light of day:

Robert Mitchum in The Amsterdam Kill. Rock Hudson and Mia Farrow in Avalanche. Sophia Loren and John Cassavetes in Brass Target. Walter Matthau in Casey's Shadow. Kirk Douglas in The Chosen. Ryan O'Neal in The Driver.

Academy rules say movies "in English or with English subtitles, regardless of country of origin, are eligible if they were publicly exhibited by means of 35-mm film or larger for paid admission in the Los Angeles area during the calendar year 1978" for not less than a week after opening prior to midnight Dec. 31.

Balloting currently is under way for the year's Oscar presentations to be made April 9. But don't bet on Yin-Yin Shaw to come away with an Oscar for his performance in Delinquent Teenagers.

60-Day, 45-City Canadian Tour Has Russian Dancers Gasping

A dance troupe from the Soviet Union, part way through a schedule that requires it to perform in 45 different cities in two months, is finding that travelling and dancing leaves little time for anything else.

"Touring in Russia would be done at a slower pace," said artistic director Mylslav Korzhenovich after the Rossianka dance troupe performed in Kamloops.

"It would give performers more time to rest in between. We would travel by plane or train."

For the Canadian tour, the dancers are making a round trip by van between Montreal and Victoria.

They are here tonight at the Royal Theatre.

"The tour of 45 Canadian centres has been arranged as part of the Russia-Canada cultural exchange that began a few years ago," said Korzhenovich.

Most of the dancers are from Moscow. Members of Tseruli, the Georgian dance quartet, originally are from Tbilisi in the Caucasus Mountains. All the dancers, particularly those from the south, said they find the Canadian winter more severe than their own.

They said they are interested in this week's Challenge Cup hockey series between Soviet and National Hockey League all-star teams, but doubt they will have time to watch any of the televised matches.

"We like to see Canadian hockey players," said Georgian dancer Robert Kablelashvily. "Everybody knows about Bobby Hull and (Phil) Esposito."

Redfern Rapped on Home

The Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped has come out swinging in its fight to establish a group home for eight young adults at 937 Redfern.

The association has run into opposition from neighborhood residents.

Murray Kilshaw, a spokesman for the residents, said Monday people on Redfern aren't bigoted about the mentally handicapped but just feel a group home of any kind will lower property values on the street.

In a statement Tuesday, however, the association slammed the neighborhood group for its stand.

"Despite all efforts of Mr. Kilshaw and his group of residents to make it appear otherwise, the issue is really simple: They don't wish to have a group of mentally handicapped persons living in their neighborhood. No doubt they would be quite supportive if the home were located elsewhere, just so long as it wasn't next to them."

The association said: "What is at issue, and we wish to make this point with some emphasis, is the basic rights of human beings — in this case eight mentally handicapped adults — to live wherever they wish in the community."

The statement goes on to say that the house on Redfern was found only after considerable searching and is completely adequate for its intended use.

Kilshaw had maintained the house was too small and would result in crowded quarters for the handicapped.

"The argument that it is not a suitable home flies in the face of the evidence," the association said.

"When completed and ready for occupancy the home will have seven bedrooms, two bathrooms, a large kitchen, separate dining room, large living room and a large, separate, rumpus room. It would be the association's view that this is adequate accommodation."

Adds the statement: "The association is in no way interested in trying to deny the rights of the residents of Redfern Street. But when they insist, as they seem to be doing, that they have the right to deny others the right to live in the community, in a place of their choosing, then we must insist that these people — in this case eight mentally handicapped adults — have some rights, too."

The association concludes its statement by saying that it fully intends to press ahead with plans to have the home licensed under the Community Care Facilities Licensing Act.

IT TOOK LONGEST TO BAG ELK

B.C. hunters wandered the woods an average of 43 days for every elk that was killed in 1977, a wildlife management survey has found.

Deer were somewhat less elusive than elk taking 17.7 hunting days for each kill, while caribou (25.6 days) and mountain sheep (36 days) proved only a bit easier to bag.

The statistics were the result of a questionnaire distributed at the end of the season.

A new one has been mailed to provincial hunters in an effort to monitor the 1978 hunting success rate.

Wilkie Overdose Fatal, Jury Told

A 23-year-old Wilkinson Road jail inmate died Jan. 18 of a drug overdose, a coroner's jury was told Tuesday night.

An autopsy showed Roy Gunderson had a lethal level of morphine in his body, Dr. Mel Wing Yip, a Vancouver chemist testified.

Victoria pathologist Dr. Kenneth Thornton said Gunderson, who had been in jail about a month awaiting trial on a weapons charge, had severe lung and heart damage known as "junkie's lung."

Thornton said the condition is the result of an accumulation of foreign substances in the lungs brought about by the filler material used to cut street drugs before they are sold.

He compared the condition to that of a middle-aged or older person suffering from a combination of bronchitis, smoking and industrial pollution.

He said he'd never seen such an advanced state in anyone as young as Gunderson.

Thornton said he suspected Gunderson had taken morphine or heroin, which turns to morphine in the blood, some hours before he died.

"This pushed the man over the brink," he said. "He didn't have any respiratory reserve. He would have continued living but for that dose of that drug which pushed him over into death."

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to Monday.

Islands Trust Against Sale of Crown Land

The Islands Trust council is opposed to the government's plan to free Crown land for individual purchasers.

At a weekend meeting at Ganges on Spring Island, the council said Crown land subdivision is one of the three potential dangers to island environment.

"Crown land is recognized as a vital open space component of most islands should be retained," the council said, adding there is already a glut of 7,000 vacant parcels of privately owned land.

Lands Minister Jim Chabot has said legislation will be introduced at the spring session to free millions of acres of land so individuals can buy three or five acre lots at less than market value.

Other external threats to island environment are pollution from sewer outfalls and herbicides.

The council asked its coast zone management committee to investigate possible danger to oyster and clam beds from sewers in the Courtenay-Comox area.

And it passed a resolution requesting the Pollution Control Branch to refuse permits to utility companies to spray herbicides on rights-of-way within the trust area.

The council also discussed the need to prepare a regional plan.

Twenty elected trustees attended the two-day conference. The Islands Trust was struck in 1974 to preserve and protect the unique amenities and environment of the trust area.

In 1977, authority for land planning was turned over to the trust from the regional districts.

Gelatin for Perfect Finale

cooking with kay

By KAY SPICER

Glamorous gelatin desserts make perfect finales for winter meals. Sparkling, clear fruit molds or satiny, smooth, creamy rings even tantalize diners who usually skip dessert.

I like them because they're usually lovely to look at as well as refreshing and delicious to eat. Because they must be prepared ahead, dessert is ready — freeing the cook for last minute meal-time chores.

Before folding in solids, stiffly beaten eggs whites or whipped cream, chill a gelatin mixture until it is slightly thickened or the consistency of unbeaten egg white. If it is to be used in a whip or snow, the gelatin mixture should be chilled until it is slightly thicker than unbeaten egg white before it is beaten.

EGG NOG BAVARIAN WITH WINTER FRUIT SALAD
(Makes 8 servings)

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
½ cup boiling water
1½ cups egg nog, canned, dairy carton or homemade ¼ teaspoon rum extract (optional)
1 pint whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup sugar
2 pears, halved and cored
2 oranges, peeled
2 bananas, peeled
2 apples, halved and cored
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Sprinkle gelatin over cold water. Let stand for 5 minutes. Add boiling water. Stir until dissolved. Spice egg nog with rum extract, if desired. Slowly stir in liquid gelatin. Chill until mixture begins to gel.

Combine whipping cream and vanilla in a chilled bowl. Whip until stiff, gradually adding sugar during last part of whipping. Fold into egg nog mixture. Pour into one quart ring mold that has been rinsed with water.

Chill for at least 4 hours to set mixture. Dip mold in warm water for a few seconds. Unmold on to platter. Slice fruit, toss with lemon juice and sugar. Fill centre of mold with fruit. Place any extra fruit in a small glass bowl to erve with mold.

NESSELRODE CREAM
(Makes 16 servings)

½ cup sweet sherry
½ cup raisins
½ cup chopped candied peel
¼ cup chopped candied cherries and/or pineapple
¼ cup slivered almonds
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup sugar
4 eggs, separated
1 cup whipping cream (35%)

Warm sherry but do not boil and pour over raisins, candied fruit and almonds. Let stand at least 10 minutes. Mix gelatin and sugar. Beat egg yolks in top of double boiler.

Stir in cream and gelatin-sugar miture. Stir over hot water, just below the boiling point, until thickened and mixture coats a spoon. (If the water boils under the mixture, the custard will become curdled.) Removed from heat and stir in fruit and sherry. Cool completely until mixture begins to set. Beat egg whites until they form stiff (but not dry) peaks. Gently fold into gelatin mixture.

Pour into a glass serving bowl and chill for at least 4 hours. Decorate with additional whipped cream, candied fruit and almonds, if desired.

MANDARIN ORANGE CREAM
(Makes 8 servings)

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
¾ cup boiling water
2 cups vanilla ice cream
1 can (6¼ 0z.) frozen concentrated orange juice
1 can (10 oz.) mandarin orange sections
Whipped cream, optional
Cinnamon, optional

Sprinkle gelatin over cold water. Let stand for 5 minutes. Add boiling water. Stir until gelatin dissolves. Stir in vanilla ice cream, a spoonful at a time. Beat to thoroughly blend mixture.

Stir in orange juice and mandarin orange liquid. Cut orange sections into pieces. Fold into gelatin mixture. Garnish with a dollop of whipped cream and a dash of cinnamon, if desired.

Even the confirmed dessert skippers are tantalized

TV Lip Reading

LONDON (CP) — A TV series on lip reading, believed to be the first of its kind in the world, began recently on the BBC. It has full approval of Britain's most famous lip reader, the deaf MP Jack Ashley. Brigit Barry, producer of the show, says she has learned that women are easier to lip read than men, and that hearing loss is not restricted to the elderly.

BEWARE OF SUGAR - MD

MOOSE JAW (CP) — A Montreal doctor has called sugar a dangerous substance and linked small amounts of it to hyperactivity in children.

Dr. A. J. Kirshner, a consultant to Montreal Children's Hospital, told parents of children with learning disabilities at a seminar that violence and psychotic behavior have been related to sugar intake. Removing excess sugar from the diet also improves memory.

Kirshner said a seven-year-old girl stopped walking and talking in her sleep and stopped having nightmares within five days of having sugar removed from her diet.

Kirshner explained this and other similar cases in terms of the effects on the brain of sugar. The brain has only one food—blood sugar or glucose and the entire bloodstream contains only two tablespoons of sugar.

Insulin digests sugar but when there is two much, double amounts of insulin are produced which then consumes too much sugar. This activates the adrenalin and more sugar is needed.

Cane sugar enters the bloodstream too quickly. Fruit sugar is released gently and does not trigger double insulin production.

Kirshner said a child's inability to concentrate occurs when the sugar level drops following double producton of insulin caused by too much sugar in the first place.

Don't Forget Tuna

Ever get so involved in meal planning that you forget that perennial favorite, tuna casserole?

Yes, it can happen. Most of us have fond memories of the various ways tuna was served at home, and you'll be surprised to find that today's families feel the same way, too.

Tuna Lorenzo is a special favorite. Number one . . . it tastes absolutely delicious. And number two . . . it's a whole meal all by itself. Perhaps the second point is more important to the busy homemaker who has been out or at work all day.

And this is a different casserole . . . it's made on top of the range and spooned over rice, which is a "plus" feature if some family members don't like everything baked together.

TUNA LORENZO

1 cup sliced green onions, including tops
1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (10¾ oz.) condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
2 tablespoons dry white wine
½ cup half-and-half (cream and milk)
½ tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 can (9¼ oz.) tuna, drained
1 cup cooked green peas
¼ cup sour cream
salt and pepper
3 cups hot cooked rice

Saute onions and mushrooms in butter until soft. Add soup, mustard, wine, half-and half, and Worcestershire sauce. Heat; add tuna, peas and sour cream. Season to taste. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings. Each serving provides: 315 calories.

By HILDA BEASTALL

The yellow winter turnip deserves better treatment than to be considered as the poor relation among the vegetables. As a source of vitamin C even when cooked, it ranks high when other sources are more expensive due to winter shortages.

Double the amount of this vitamin is available when the yellow turnip is grated and eaten raw. Use it with an equal amount of Mackintosh apple. Amounts of many essential minerals are found in the turnip together with other vitamins, making it worth serving in raw winter salads with whatever you have on hand.

Combine cooked turnip with a serving of briefly cooked spinach, endive or kale to improve the total vatamin A content of turnip after cooking.

As with most vegetables, cooking the second time destroys more nutrients, so leftovers are best used in salads with a little seasoned homemade yogurt of the low-fat type.

When wanting the distinctive rich flavor of yellow turnip in soup, a piece or two of leftover cooked is all right to use, but don't depend on it for food values.

Touches of different seasonings at different cookings will add interest to turnip dishes—a little touch of powdered ginger or a tiny piece of root ginger when boiling the vegetable, works wonders without disguising the basic flavor.

Some cooks add sugar to take off the sharpness, but a few pieces of parsnip (also available all winter) will do the same with the benefit of additional minerals and vitamins all lacking in commercial sugar.

Contrast of color is achieved with the bright green of spinach, swiss chard, or kale in winter (the spinach is imported fresh at this season), but in our normal winters the chard and kale grows well throughout the season in home gardens.

Cooked beet slices are attractive for color appeal; don't overlook this aspect of mealtime. Food that looks good, starts digestive juices flowing, is likely to be enjoyed and is therefore better utilized by the body, we are told. I can well believe this by having known people who simply hated the idea of food in any form, who ate just because they must to keep alive but showed the dreadful result of their attitude in poor physique and general poor health.

Turnip soup makes a hearty nourishing winter dish, needing no more than 30 minutes total gently cooking.

TURNIP SOUP IN WINTER

4 cups turnip slices
2 Tbsp soft margarine
3 cups vegetable stock (liquid)
(potato water is good)
½ cup skim milk powder
2 cups hot water
2 Tbsp wholewheat flour
½ tsp salt
a few grains ginger powder
1 Tbsp yeast powder (torula)

Pare turnip to take off thick outer skin. Slice thin.

Melt margarine in heavy saucepan having cover. Add turnip, cook gently until becoming tender. Add the vegetable stock (saved from previous days) bring quickly to boil; then simmer for about 10 minutes or until turnip is soft.

Meanwhile in a small bowl, mix flour and milk powder with a little cold water, adding hot water to soup pan. Pour in flour mixture, stirring to cook for 2 minutes until smooth and thickened. Add salt and ginger; remove from heat.

Stir in yeast powder (this adds almost a meat flavor and many nutrient values, but should not be cooked at high heat); serve hot to four. Use hot or at least warmed plates for hot soups in winter.

Here is a good casserole dish.

TURNIP AND APPLE CASSEROLE

2 cups yellow turnip, diced
2 cups sweet apple, diced
1 Tbsp sugar
½ tsp salt
¼ cup wholewheat breadcrumbs
1 Tbsp soft margarine
¼ cup vegetable stock
¼ cup wholewheat crumbs (second amount)

Dice peeled turnip and apple small; put into small casserole. Add sugar, salt and first amount breadcrumbs and toss with 2 forks. Dot with margarine.

Add vegetable stock (potato or other vegetable cooking liquid).

Cover and bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C for 25 minutes. Test turnip for tenderness; if nearly done, then sprinkle with second amount breadcrumbs.

Return to oven without cover for 5 minutes to brown slightly. If desired, sprinkle top lightly with grated cheddar cheese after taking from oven.

Goes well with brown rice and mushrooms, which can be finished for the last 30 minutes in same oven heat. Serve with mound of shredded cabbage slaw.

Next is a top of stove recipe to go with cabbage and celery salad.

Braising is simply cooking in a covered pan at low heat with minimum of water.

BRAISED YELLOW TURNIP

1 medium turnip (4 servings)
2 Tbsp soft margarine
½ cup vegetable stock
1 tsp sugar (or use apple)
1 Tbsp fresh lemon juice (could use orange juice)

Peel turnip and slice about ¼-inch thick. Cut in half to fit into frypan or sillet having a lid.

Cook turnip slices in margarine with gentle heat, and covered, until partially tender. Add vegetable stock slowly; bring back to gentle boil. Sprinkle with sugar (or use slices sweet apple) and let simmer until turnip (and apple if used) is tender.

Remove lid and let glaze (most of liquid evaporate) then sprinkle lemon juice over all and serve hot with pan brownings scraped off with wooden spoon. This is really delicious.

Finely sliced celery stalks, green cabbage leaves, and a leaf or two of fresh spinach all cooked together for 10 minutes can be used as a cooked green salad if the day is cold and you must have a piping hot supper.

Turnips were always known as good farm fare in past years; why not make a return to them now that good food is as important as ever?

It's quite an investment to buy a ham to bake for a party. So, don't toughen it, dry it out and shrink it by baking in a too-hot oven, says a food services professor. Hams are already cooked to at least 150°F. Bake it at 300° only long enough to bring the internal temperature up to serving temperature. That's 20 minutes a pound for large hams, 25 minutes a pound for small ones.

CURDLE TAKEN FROM MILK

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Children who hate milk may someday be able to get its nutritional benefits undetected in other drinks, thanks to a new filtering process developed by a Vancouver scientist.

Dr. Shuryo Nakai, a research scientist at the University of British Columbia, is a food specialist who's developed a technique where all the nutritious elements in milk can be filtered into a clear, water—like liquid.

Dr Nakai said that perfecting the method took three years of research and experimentation.

"When regular milk is added to fruit juice, the protein in the milk causes it to curdle," Dr Nakai said. "But by fragmenting the molecular structure of the milk, it is possible to avoid this reaction."

The scientist's most difficult problem was removing the bitterness in the milk. This was overcome by using a complicated absorption technique.

Dr. Nakai said that though the university doesn't have the facility, desire or funds to develop the process as a commercial venture, several private interests have shown interest in developing the system.

Premature Development?

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I have noticed that my 11-year-old boy seems to be prematurely developed. I don't want to call this to his attention and make him feel he is different from other boys his age. However, my wife and I are concerned about this. We don't know how to handle it. Should we just ignore it? — MR. T.P.

DEAR MR. P.:

There are, of course, many variations in the maturation process of children. Some show evidence of sexual development at an earlier age than others.

However, it is relatively simple to have your son tested to be sure there is no underlying hormonal imbalance to account for this unusual, if not rare, physical precociousness. Laboratory studies, X-rays of the skull and the long bones, steroid evaluation and hormone balance can give evidence of any abnormality that may exist. If any unusual findings become evident, the underlying cause can be pinpointed, and corrective measures instituted.

If your son's precocious puberty lies within the range of normalcy, your doctor can help direct your approach to a discussion with your son so the boy will not be self-conscious of any differences between him and his age-group peers.

I have a deviated septum of the nose. I'm afraid to have the operation to correct it because I worry that it will change the shape of my nose. Can a deviation be corrected without an operation? — Miss Y.R.

DEAR MISS R.:

The nasal septum divides one side of the nose from the other. Rarely, if ever, do doctors find that a septum is completely straight. In other words, almost everybody has a slight deviation of the septum.

"Why, then, should the septum ever be operated on?" you may well ask. When the nasal septum is so deviated that it presses on other vital structures of the nose (turbinates), or when the deviation interferes with comfortable breathing, there may be a clear-cut indication for surgery.

Sometimes, patients who have allergic reactions in the nose develop swelling of the nasal tissue. This, in combination with a deviated septum, may virtually block the nose and make breathing very difficult.

The front of the nasal septum is made up of cartilage. The back portion is made up of a thin, flat bone. It is impossible to change the position of the nasal septum without surgery. For cartilage bounces back to its original position. Therefore, no non-surgical manipulation can straighten it.

The operation, known as a "sub-mucous resection" of the nose, will not affect the outward appearance of the nose in any way.

Store Front Testing

TORONTO (CP) — A New York heart specialist says he would like to see storefront offices where people could have their blood tested for high cholesterol levels.

Dr. Virgil Brown said in an interview at least half the population is eating more cholesterol than is healthy for them.

Cholesterol is contained in foods such as egg yolks, liver, kidneys, fatty meats and cheese made from whole milk.

Brown, in Toronto to participate in a free public forum on cholesterol sponsored by the Ontario Heart Foundation, said research costs make it too expensive to prove whether reduced cholesterol levels really do prevent heart disease in a human.

Animal studies which show overwhelmingly that there is enough basis for screening cholesterol levels will have to suffice, he said.

Scarth to Oxford

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's first woman Rhodes scholar, 22-year-old Shelagh Scarth, plans to use her two years at Oxford to study constitutional history. She says that in two years there may be a new constitution in Canada "and the field will be open to applying it."

$50 WAY TO AVOID COLDS

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The next time you're sneezing and sniffing don't compound the misery by worrying why modern science can't find a cure for the common cold.

Instead, consider the advice of a Canadian professor who says that for as little as $50 you can buy a humidifier and reduce the chances of ever getting a cold again.

Professor George H. Green of the University of Saskatchewan says the common cold, the most widespread of the respiratory infections that strike millions of people each year, is fostered by both excessively low and high indoor humidity.

Green, who attended the semiannual meeting of the American Society of Heating, Refrigeration, and Air-Conditioning Engineers, said humidity between 40 and 60 percent is healthiest.

"In laboratory and field research, bacteria and virus counts were significantly lowered in conditions at mid-range," he said. "Bacteria live the shortest period at 50 percent."

The problem in winter, he found, is that humidity in most homes and offices is too low.

Green, who teaches mechanical engineering, said he began investigating the subject in 1967 when a colleague suggested he look at the relationship between absenteeism in schools and humidity.

In six out of eight studies conducted in classrooms where humidity was controlled, children exposed to higher humidity showed a lower percentage of absenteeism due to winter colds.

He said the studies are significant because 95 percent of the work force works indoors.

No-Heat Apartment Kills Baby Cynthia

NEW YORK (AP) — Her relatives lined the windows with cardboard from diaper boxes to keep out the cold. But they didn't pay their gas bill for 18 months, and nine-month-old Cynthia Feliccea, clad only in diapers, was found frozen to death in her crib.

Her two-year-old brother, Tommy, was found swollen with frostbite when police were called to the basement apartment of the two-storey house that utility company officials said had been unheated since July, 1977. The temperature was about minus 10° C.

Authorities said they are considering charges against the baby's parents, Thomas Feliccea, 21, and Eileen Feliccea, 24.

Thirteen others in four generations lived in the house in the South Ozone Park section of Queens.

Frank Feliccea, the infant's grandfather, found the child's body Tuesday and called police from a neighbor's home.

The children's stomachs were bloated because "all they ever fed them was warm water or tea," said an 18-year-old neighbor, Eddie Cruz. "They'd cry themselves to sleep down there in the cellar."

Tommy Feliccea was treated at Queens General Hospital for exposure. Three other young children, including two cousins, were turned over to the city's Bureau of Child Welfare after being treated for exposure.

Another neighbor, Russell Cordero, 15, said older family members frequently only ate "macaroni boiled in water with nothing on it."

William Hand, a spokesman for Brooklyn Union Gas Co., said the meter at the two-storey structure was removed July 26, 1977, for a long-overdue bill totalling $1,397.30.

"I don't know what they did for heat last winter," he said, adding that the family had been advised the meter could be reinstalled if they paid the bill by instalments or some other method. The family never responded, Hand said.

"Nobody in the house works," Cordero said. "Almost everybody gets a (welfare) cheque."

Protesting Farmers Get Cold Comfort

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cold and stiff from spending the night sleeping in cars or campers, farmers aimed their protest at Congress, where the agriculture secretary planned to deliver an upbeat message about prosperity on U.S. farms.

"The state of American agriculture is substantially better than it was a year ago," Secretary Bob Bergland said in prepared remarks that sharply contradicted the views of 3,500 protesting grain and cotton farmers. The farmers claimed to be squeezed between low prices for crops and high prices for fertilizer, machinery, fuel, land and the like.

"In virtually every respect," Bergland said, "1978 was a good year for the American farmer."

His testimony was prepared for delivery today before the House of Representatives agriculture committee — and an audience of 400 critical farm militants, who say they fear losing their land back home if they lose their case in Washington.

Heavy security measures were taken to protect Bergland in the aftermath of his hard-nosed rejection of the farmers' demand for new laws to restore their income.

Protest leader Don Patterson of The Plains, Va., planned to go on television today to reply to Bergland's remark Tuesday that while some farmers have "local" problems, many simply made bad business judgments, paid too much for land, were seeking publicity or were "driven by old-fashioned greed."

Patterson disowned Bergland at a rally Tuesday evening.

"After what he said this morning, I don't think we can recognize him anymore," he told the shivering farmers.

It was evident that crude living conditions, trouble with the police and the cold and windy nastiness of February on the Potomac have sapped the spirit of many of the protesters. Only 600 attended; 5,000 had cheered lustily at the same site a day earlier.

While some of the demonstrators have settled into hotels, hundreds were sleeping and eating in their encampment on the Mall — prisoners, they said, of the police, who would not let their tractors out on the streets.

The farmers lacked toilets and water, and found scant sympathy here.

In frustration, some threw rocks at police, slashed tires, burned a tractor, drove around in circles in the compound. One plunged a rusted Farmall 400 into a pond, breaking through its crust of ice.

Teng, Fukuda Discuss Soviets

TOKYO (AP) — Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping of China told former premier Takeo Fukuda of Japan today that the United States "is allowing the Soviet Union to place a lot of pawns on the world's chessboard" and "things cannot be allowed to go on this way," a spokesman for Fukuda reported.

The former premier's secretary, Yoshiro Mori, told reporters Teng during an hour's visit said: "The Russians already are in Iran. It is no good that the Americans allow Russia to continue to use Cuba in Africa," and Cambodia, a Chinese ally, has been invaded by Vietnam, a Soviet ally.

Teng, stopping in Japan for two days en route home from the United States, called on Fukuda because he was premier when the Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty was signed last year.

Mori also quoted Teng as saying: "Should the U.S. troops leave South Korea, they will still be nearby, so it will not affect the stability of the region. But it would be better for both Taiwan and South Korea if the troops were withdrawn."

Asked by Fukuda whether China would agree to cultural and economic relations with South Korea now that the North and South have proposed talks on reunification, Mori said Teng replied: "We believe that for the time being we should not do so. Rather we should deal with the matter from a higher level."

Teng told Fukuda that President Carter also suggested China improve relations with South Korea. But Teng said Korean unification talks should not be undertaken in a hurry, and he and Fukuda agreed the Chinese government should keep in close contact with North Koreans while the Japanese government does likewise with the South Koreans, Mori said.

TRY ZUCCHINI ITALIAN STYLE

8 medium (6") zucchinis, sliced
¼ cup margarine
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup fine chopped celery
¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
1 tsp. tarragon
4 tsp. sugar
2 tbsp. cornstarch
1 tsp. salt
⅔ cup tomato paste (not sauce)
1⅓ cup water

To make sauce melt margarine and stir in onion, celery and green pepper and gently saute 10 minutes. Do not brown. Then stir in tarragon, sugar, salt and cornstarch and when they are blended stir in the tomato paste and water until thick. Keep warm.

Wash, trim and slice zucchinis and cook until barely tender. If you overcook them they will lose their crispness and go olive green in color. Drain, tip into preheated vegetable dish. Pour boiling hot tomato sauce over all and serve.

Why Beef Costs So Much

Many factors contribute to current beef prices. Supplies are lower than they have been for the last two or three years and will likely continue to remain so for some time. Also the lower value of the Canadian dollar has raised prices of imported beef. Consumer demand for beef continues to grow so this results in higher retail prices.

Daniel Ricard, economist with Agriculture Canada explains how retail prices are determined. He sites the following example using farm, wholesale and retail prices recently observed in a typical western market.

"Beef prices at the supermarket are determined by a complicated price system. It is important to note that it takes about 2.3 pounds of live animal to yield one pound of beef at retail. When a 1,000 pound live steer is marketed, the meat packer may pay about 61.5 cents a pound or $615 for the live animal. The animal is slaughtered and the head, hinde, organs, fat, etc. are removed. These losses, combined with shrinkage during aging, reduce the weight of the 1,000 pound animal to an average carcass of 576 pounds.

"The packer sells the beef by-products for further processing into animal feed, plasma or leather products. Over the last year his returns from the sale of these by-products has increased to as much as $65 per animal.

"The packer sells the remaining 576 pounds of carcass beef to the retailer at about $1.08 per pound. He then receives about $622 for the beef carcass for which he paid $615 on the live animal. This combined with what he receives from the sale of by-products ($65) covers the costs of slaughter, chilling, aging in refrigeration storage and delivery to the retailer. After the retailer has cut it up into retail cuts, trimmed the fat and removed the bones, he will likely have only 428 pounds of carcass beef left.

"The retailer must sell the cuts as quickly as possible, in three to four days, to avoid further waste. He must add on a mark-up to the price to allow him to cover his expenses (labor, refrigeration, store overhead, etc.) and still allow some profit. He may have to price the 428 pounds of trimmed beef carcass at an average price of about $1.66 per pound or a total of $710.

Many cuts will be priced below this average value but others such as rib roasts and steaks will be well above it. The higher priced cuts make up only about one-third of the carcass and are in greatest demand."

What does all this mean to the consumer? Basically it points out the wide variation there can be in the price of retail meat cuts, depending on the demand and type of cut. Individual preferences and the value a person attaches to each cut will determine his choice.

Opening lead — six of hearts.

It was useless to ask Sylvia why she had made a certain bid or play, even though the bid or play might have been one which, if they had made it themselves, would cause most players to question their own sanity.

Sylvia had her own conception of how the game should be played, and anyone who questioned her at length along rational lines would inevitably find himself beating his head against a stone wall.

Sylvia's thoughts actually followed what seemed to her to be logical lines, and yet, at the same time, these thoughts appeared to others in the club so far removed from reality that she quickly established her reputation as the club's zaniest player.

Naturally, Sylvia's pyrotechnics produced weird results from time to time, but not all of them worked to her disadvantage. Occasionally her methods resulted in a totally unexpected triumph, and it was this occasional victory that made her the most talked-about member of the club.

Sylvia was playing in the expert game one day and held the East hand. West led a trump against six hearts and Sylvia covered dummy's ten with the jack. Declarer won with the ace and played a low spade to dummy's eight.

Most players would have taken the eight with the queen, but, being Sylvia, she took dummy's eight with the ace and returned a trump. Apparently declarer was deceived by Sylvia's play, because he then drew her last trump, cashed the king of spades and continued with the jack.

When West followed low, South confidently discarded a club from dummy, certain that Sylvia could not have the queen. He then went into a state of deep shock when Sylvia won the jack with the queen and inscribed 100 points on her score.

FUN WITH FIGURES

"What time did Dellers call?" Brenda asked. "I must call them back."

Things were quiet in the office that afternoon and old Sam likes his little joke. "I made a note of it," he replied. "It was just 28 minutes ago, three times as much before 3 p.m. as it is after 2 p.m. now. And it's no good looking at our clock as it's stopped."

What time was the call?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: TOAST was 79567 (odd).

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: We work with an attractive woman who is in her early 50s. She was born in England and has lived in the U.S. for 30 years.

Three years ago she started working in this office, and because of her English accent we were all charmed by her. But lately she has begun to irritate us because she never loses an opportunity to put down this country. (According to her, everything is better in England!)

She has never bothered to become an American citizen. Do you think a person who is not a citizen of this country has the right to criticize it?

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: Yes, freedom of speech gives her the right to criticize. But as a resident alien who has lived on the American economy for 30 years, she shows poor taste in exercising that right. Basically, she is a guest of Uncle Sam, and a good guest does not criticize her host.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is the woman my husband used to see before he married me. She keeps sending Arthur "miss you" cards, birthday telegrams, Christmas cards, etc., to remind him that she's still around. These reminders are sent to our home and signed, "with love."

Arthur makes no effort to hide them. He just drops them in the wastebasket, and I find them when I empty the trash. I have begged him to ring up this woman and tell her to please leave him alone, but he won't do it. He says he has never done anything to encourage her. I believe him, but don't you think if Arthur really cared about my feelings he would do something to put a stop to all this?

I am 53 and Arthur is 62, and this is the second marriage for both of us.

JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: If you're wise, you'll stop begging your husband to ring up his old flame for any reason. By ignoring her he is discouraging her in the best possible way. She probably never enters his mind until you bring her up.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since I can remember, my husband has given me $100 in cash and told me to buy myself a Christmas present. It's been all right with me because Alex hates to shop. Besides, his taste is so lousy that whenever he'd buy me something I'd have to exchange it for something else.

Well, for the last three Christmases Alex has given me the usual cash gift, then a week later he'd ask to "borrow" it until after the first of the year — and that was the last I saw of my "present."

Some present, huh? Any suggestions?

GIFTLESS

DEAR GIFTLESS: Yes. As soon as you get the cash, either spend it or bank it.

DEAR ABBY: I take strong exception to the writer who took you to task for addressing a clergyman as "Reverend So and So."

She wrote, "Reverend is an adjective, meaning honorable. You may say, 'The Reverend Mr. Blank,' or 'The Reverend Dr. Blank,' but, Abby, please do not address a clergyman as 'Reverend Anybody.' It's simply not done!"

How wrong! As a minister of the United Methodist Church I have always been addressed as "Reverend" — same as my father and father-in-law, and I love it. I would object vigorously were members of my congregation to address me as "Mister."

Our Episcopal friends address their bishop as "Right Reverend." I maintain that common usage by countless thousands makes it OK to call a pastor "Reverend."

If it's correct for our Catholic friends to call their priest "Father," or for our Jewish friends to call their clergyman "Rabbi," then it should be OK for my parishioners (and others) to call me "Reverend."

Sign me . . .

REVEREND H.

DEAR REVEREND H.: The English language purists will probably shoot me down, but adjectives serve well in addressing people. However:

The hassle over the use of Reverend
Will neverend.

Tower French Backers Win One

MONTREAL (CP) — After two days of internal wrangling, Quebec air controllers have won the right to present their viewpoint before a federal inquiry into bilingual air control in Quebec.

Yves Aubry, Quebec director of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association (CATCA), told the inquiry just before closing Tuesday that two Quebec controllers would represent "a minority viewpoint" for the association.

"We as Quebec's controllers want bilingual instrument flight rules while the majority of Canadian controllers have a different viewpoint," Aubry said in an interview..

None of the four-member CATCA delegation to the inquiry is from Quebec, where the commmssion has already recommended that bilingual communications be extended.

Beginning today, however, controllers Jean-Luc Patenaude of Quebec City, a former CATCA regional president, and Robert Fleury of Montreal will have the right to cross-examine witnesses called by the commission.

A report on the 18-month tests in Hull, Que., released a month ago, concluded that French could safely be introduced into instrument flying over Quebec.

French is already used by controllers and pilots on smaller aircraft flying by visual flight rules at seven smaller Quebec airports.

The commission was told Monday that no safety incidents related to language had been reported since French was introduced in 1977.

A CLOWN CARICATURE of Prime Minister Trudeau greeted "mourners" on Parliament Hill Tuesday at a mock funeral for language training programs in the federal civil service. White-hooded pall-bearers carried a coffin labelled "Bilingualism," while the clown carried the axe he used to "kill" bilingualism. Taking part were about 200 language teachers slated to lose their jobs at the end of March, instead of sometime in 1983, because of the decision to put an early end to teaching French and English in the civil service.

MILK EXPORT HIT

OTTAWA (CP) — An MP said Tuesday government efforts to sell infant milk products in South America will contribute to malnutrition and undercut local dairy industries in those countries.

Lorne Nystrom, New Democratic consumer critic, said infant formulas have been shown to be a major contributor to infant malnutrition in South America because of their poor nutritional quality.

In a letter to Trade Minister Jack Horner, he said: "In Peru, imported powdered milk, reconstituted as tinned milk, is undercutting local dairy farmers and placing an additional burden on the balance of payments in a country with serious financial difficulties."

Speaking later in a Commons motion, he said a government sponsored "milk trade mission" is currently touring five South America hoping to increase exports of skimmed milk powder and infant feeding products.

It was unfortunate that while the government was pushing baby formulas abroad, the health department was promoting breast-feeding as a nutritional alternative to instant formulas.

VANCOUVER CAR-RENTAL BATTLEGROUND

MONTREAL (CP) — A price war between major car rental companies across the country has sent rental rates tumbling faster than the Canadian dollar in recent weeks.

Ted Tilden, of Montreal-based Tilden Rent-A-Car, said Tuesday that rates in some cities were changing hourly as companies lowered prices in attempts to undercut each other.

He said it was possible in some places to rent a car for as little as one cent for the first day of a two-day contract.

Prices for the second day varied, but in Vancouver, where costs were lowest Tuesday, a sub-compact rented for $8.95 — bringing the two-day total cost to $8.96, Tilden said.

"Last week, we were going down as much as $1 or $2 a day until we got as low as $6.95 a day for a sub-compact." But some prices had begun rising this week.

The price war began when United States-controlled Budget Rent-A-Car Ltd., which traditionally tries to offer the lowest prices, discovered its prices were above Tilden's.

Budget officials in Montreal could not be reached Tuesday, but Tilden said the competition was fiercest at airports because the concessions there account for 50 per cent of all car rental business.

Both Tilden and Robert Taylor, president of Avis Canada, said Vancouver was the first city to be hit.

NO FAIR PEEKING: Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan probably has good reason to hide the results of his weigh-in Tuesday in Ottawa. Whelen is taking part in a Save-the-Children slimathon where money is pledged for lost poundage.

Metric-Switch 'Ripoffs' Rile MP

OTTAWA (CP) — An opposition critic said Tuesday the government's latest efforts to step up the move to metric measures are lunatic and arbitrary.

Conservative Ray Hnatyshyn complained in the Commons that retailers will face fines if they violate a new law requiring them to advertise products such as meat and candy in kilograms rather than pounds and ounces by 1981.

A consumer affairs spokesman said later those who cannot comply with the law for good reasons will not be prosecuted.

Grocery retailers must also be using metric scales by the end of 1981.

But Hnatyshyn warned consumers can easily be "ripped off" without government supervision of nationwide conversions.

He said the metric conversion at gasoline stations beginning Jan. 1 resulted in an increase of one cent per litre. Translated, that meant five cents a gallon.

Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said his department has mounted an information program. Inspectors were working with manufacturers, oil and gas firms to help with the conversion.

He said later in an interview department inspectors will continue checking retailers for accurate scales.

Conservative Bill Kempling charged the $100 million it cost for metric conversion of scales will "lie on the backs of consumers."

He said instead of reducing excise tax by 50 per cent on imported scales, the government should have encouraged Canadian manufacturers to provide them.

Industry Minister Jack Horner told MPs there is nothing to stop manufacturers here from getting in on the action.

Meanwhile, an official with the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. has warned home builders not to take lightly the May 1 deadline for converting all new home construction plans to the metric system.

"We're dead serious about the first of May," said Robert Player, general manager for the Atlantic region.

The warning was an apparent reference to the company's earlier deadline.

Stamp Issues For '79 Listed

OTTAWA (CP) — Stamp collectors will be able to choose from among 34 commemorative and five new definitive stamps to be issued this year, the post office said Tuesday.

In its quarterly Philatelic Bulletin, the post office said one of the highlights this year will be the June 15 issue of 12 stamps depicting provincial and territorial flags.

Two stamps have already been issued. A $1 definitive Fundy National Park stamp was released Jan. 24 and a 14-cent stamp honoring the Quebec Winter Carnival was put on sale Feb. 1.

Three other definitives showing the Queen, the Parliament Buildings and a tree will be issued March 8. The first two will cost 17 cents and the last 35 cents.

The bulletin said the popular, endangered-wildlife series will be continued April 10 with the issue of 17- and 35-cent stamps showing a turtle and a whale, respectively.

On April 27, two 17-cents stamps on the postal code and a $2 definitive showing Kluane National Park will be on sale.

More 17-cent stamps honoring Canadian authors Emile Nelligan and Fredrick Phillip Grove will be issued May 3 and on May 11 there will be two more 17-cent stamps depicting Col. John By and Col. Charles-Michel de Salaberry.

On Aug. 16, 17-cent stamps for the women's field hockey championships and canoe-kayak world championships will be issued. They will be followed Sept. 13 by four more showing Inuit shelters.

On Oct. 17, the combined Christmas-United Nations Year of the Child stamps worth 15, 17 and 35 cents will be issued.

This year's issue concludes Nov. 15 with two 17-cent and two 35-cent stamps showing aircraft.

Vandals Save Cold Cash

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Meter saboteurs are making it miserable for workmen in this Northwest Territories community.

The villains are taking advantage of sub-zero weather to freeze meter mechanisms.

Sabotage methods vary. At times the villains are suspected of using water pistols to squirt liquids into coin slots and key holes. On other occasions they apparently resort to spitting into the meters or wetting coins before they're inserted. Chocolate milk and soft drinks have been used as a freezing substance.

The loss of nickels, dimes and quarters from the knocked-out meters is not the main concern of collectors and repairmen for the motor vehicles branch. It's the bare-handed work they face in temperatures of -35 to -45 degrees to thaw and replace the meters.

"We're fed up but there's not much we can do about it," said sub-foreman Ron Stoodley.

About 35 of the city's 200 meters must be thawed out each week but Stoodley said sporadic blitz attacks have resulted in 20 meters needing heat treatment in one day alone.

Stoodley believes a group of teen-agers is responsible but no one has been caught.

"It's pure malicious vandalism. These meters each cost around $200 to install and it's the taxpayer's money that's spent to repair them."

When the sun foils the freezing approach attackers stuff slots with gum, slugs and bent coins.

Child Abuse Law 'Fails to Protect'

OTTAWA (CP) — Maureen McTeer, wife of Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark, says glaring gaps in Canadian law allow children to be left unprotected and without rights.

She told a meeting Tuesday of the local chapter of the National Council of Jewish Women that the law giving parents or guardians the authority to use reasonable force in discipline is totally subjective and depends on the parent's interpretation.

"As long as this provision remains, people who abuse their children will have a defence before the courts," she said, adding that there is a lack of penalties in most provinces against those who fail to report instances of child abuse.

"And the tragic cases of Adrienne Paquette and (others) last year show that even when child abuse is reported, there is no guarantee the child will not be returned to that environment."

Five-year-old Adrienne died of suffocation in June, 1977, after being gagged and bound in the basement of her home by her mother.

Retirement Law Caution

OTTAWA (CP) — Two major business organizations said Tuesday they see no reason for the government to create retirement age legislation and warned that speedy changes, permitting widespread early or late retirement, may be unwise.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce and the Canadian Manufacturers Association called for caution in a joint submission to the special Senate committee on retirement age policy.

"At the present time, we do not believe that a case has been made for legislative action in Canada," the groups said.

"Furthermore, we believe that the current market forces, including collective bargaining, have provided satisfactory options to most employees and employers."

The senators are holding hearings to eventually decide whether the government should create legislation that would prohibit employers from automatically retiring employees at age 65.

The business submission examined the pros and cons of early and late retirement and concluded by recommending that studies are needed.

"The Senate commitee should resist the temptation to move speedily, as has been done in the United States, on a problem essentially long-run in nature," they said.

The mandatory retirement age in the United States has recently been lifted to 70 from 65 for workers under government jurisdiction.

Four studies called for by the business groups would determine the effect of retirement policies on young workers and determine the differences in productivity of young and old workers.

They also would determine what effect a new retirement poolicy would have on group life insurance and disability rates and establish what it would mean for small business.

OTTAWA SAYS SORRY FOR CUSTOMS SNUB

OTTAWA (CP) — The national revenue department has apologized to eight Regina residents who were refused customs clearance when they arrived at the Regina airport last week from a holiday in Barbados.

A Pacific Western Airlines charter carried 49 passengers to Regina but under rules laid down by the customs department, only 40 can be processed there.

In this case eight passengers had to fly on to Calgary for customs clearance.

Abbott said both his department and PWA were wrong. PWA should have informed the airport in advance it were carrying more than 40 passengers and the customs officers should not have applied the rules so severely.

Replying to Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre) Abbott said the department will not pay the hotel and meal expenses the eight passengers incurred because they had to go to Calgary.

Banker Gets Jail In Loan Cover-Up

EDMONTON (CP) — A former bank manager who says he juggled $96,400 in phony bank loans to cover for friends who did not repay their loans has been jailed for two years less a day.

Alister Mailo, 47, was sentenced after he pleaded guilty to 13 counts of fraud, all of which occurred while he was manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in Sherwood Park, just east of Edmonton.

Testifying prior to sentencing, Mailo, a 27-year bank employee, agreed he was part of "very poor banking practices" when he lent large sums of money to friends and acquaintances between 1973 and 1976.

He told Alberta Supreme Court Justice M.B. O'Byrne he did not have proper documentation for the loans, so he could not report them as write-offs when the borrowers did not pay up.

Instead, he set up a domino-type payback scheme, whereby he arranged phony loans in the name of bank customers, and then used the money to pay off previous loans.

In sentencing, Mr. Justice O'Byrne recommended that Mailo be considered immediately for day parole.

Key Verdict On Bikini Buttons

EDMONTON (CP) — The case of a man who sneaked up behind women sunbathers and pulled off their bikini bottoms could make legal history in Alberta.

Thomas Gribble, 32, was found guilty in Alberta Supreme Court on five charges of indecent assault. He was remanded to a mental institution for 30 days.

However, he was not sentenced because Crown prosecutor Michael Allan applied to have Gribble declared a dangerous sex offender and detained for an indeterminate length.

Alex Pringle and Dick Mendersma, counsel for Gribble, indicated to Mr. Justice J.C. Cavanagh that they will argue at a hearing later this month that federal legislation covering dangerous sex offenders is unconstitutional.

Edmonton Symphony $145,000 in Debt

EDMONTON (CP) — The government is aware of the financial difficulties faced by the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra, according to Bob Cook, director of performing arts for the Alberta culture department.

He said he understands that the orchestra now has an accumulated deficit of about $145,000 and will ask the government for a $150,000 loan.

"I'm sure they will have to come to us for another guaranteed loan," Cook said, adding that the $150,000 loan would be the maximum granted by the government and would be the second for the symphony society, which received a similar loan five years ago.

Cook said before the loan could be approved, the society must show it has the capacity to repay the government while reducing spending at the same time.

Society president Doug Cox has told Cook that the society plans to cut some $35,000 from its current operating budget and increase donation soliciting and box-office revenue.

Costly Plug-Ins

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Telephone System (MTS) says it is losing between $400,000 and $700,000 in revenues each year because of illegal use of telephones.

The estimate was contained in a report submitted by MTS to a public utilities board hearing on rate increases.

MTS is requesting general rate increases that would, for example, increase the monthly rental to $5.90 from $4.90 for residential telephones in Winnipeg.

In the report from MTS, the crown utility said since a program was implemented to install extension jacks in homes, many people have been buying additional telephones without paying extension fees.

Crime Rate Dips

REGINA (CP) — The city's 1978 crime rate decreased by 1.3 per cent, compared with an increase of 8.1 per cent in 1977, Police Chief Al Huget said Tuesday.

But even with a decrease of 5.9 per cent in major crime, that category still tallied 12,185 offences, not an enviable statistic for a city this size, he said.

Credit's Fine

RED DEER (CP) — Red Deer has a better credit rating than Edmonton but not as good as top-rated London, Ont., says city treasurer Allan Wilcox.

He said per-capita debt should not exceed 15 per cent of a community's per-capita income. Red Deer stood at 3.7 per cent.

Wilcox said the city's per capita net debt for general purposes of $321 was "quite good" when compared with Toronto's $370 and Ottawa-Carleton's $352 but not as good as London, Ont., at $207.

Wage Hike Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Federation of Labor has urged the government to raise the provincial minimum wage to at least $3.57 an hour.

Dick Martin, president of the MFL, said the current minimum of $2.95 is too low, and should be increased by at least 20.8 per cent.

$13 Million Mall

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — A $13 million shopping mall will be built in the city's west end on the former site of a meat packing plant.

The mall was jointly announced by Primesite Developments Corp. Ltd. of Peterborough, Ont., and Toronto and Daon Development Corp. of Vancouver.

The mall is to be located on 11 acres where Burns Foods Ltd. operated a meat packing plant. The plant was closed about three years ago.

The mall is to contain two department stores, one large supermarket and 35 to 40 additional shops and services. Names of the firms that will occupy the mall are expected to be announced soon.

Sentence Doubled

CALGARY (CP) — The appellate division of Alberta Supreme Court, describing a man who has spent 11 of the last 15 years behind bars as "a menace to the community" when he is under the influence of alcohol and other intoxicants, has doubled his robbery sentence to eight years in prison.

Alexander Francis Martell was convicted in Lethbridge last October for the robbery with violence of an 82-year-old woman.

It was the latest in a record of 23 convictions that began in Nova Scotia in 1963 at age 16. The record includes two other robberies, four assaults (including two on police officers) and a number of burglaries.

Man. Finishes Payroll Trim

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government's campaign to trim the size of the provincial payroll has apparently come to an end.

Premier Sterling Lyon says the number of people in the public service has remained "pretty well constant" for the last few months.

And Finance Minister Donald Craik says the number of employees now being hired is about the same as the number leaving.

Since the Progressive Conservatives took office in October, 1977, an estimated 1,800 jobs have been trimmed from the payroll. A government document prepared in November said 4,129 vacancies were created during the government's first year in office and 2,282 new employees were hired. That meant a net reduction of 1,847 jobs.

Most of the reduction has been by attrition — resignations and retirements — but a few hundred people have lost their jobs through layoffs. Hundreds more working on contract were let go when their contracts ran out.

Salaries account for a goodly portion of the provincial budget, and the Lyon government had pledged to keep spending under control in hopes of promoting business confidence and providing tax cuts.

The total reduction in the number of people employed by the government is down about 13 per cent, but there has been some dispute about the actual figures and what the precise impact on the budget has been.

One estimate is that payroll cuts have saved about $50 million.

Layton on Trial For Ryan Murder

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — Peoples Temple member Larry Layton will go on trial Monday for conspiracy to murder Representative Leo J. Ryan.

The trial date was announced Tuesday for the 32-year-old San Franciscan, who also is charged with conspiring to murder four other persons and three counts of attempted murder.

Witnesses said Layton posed as a Temple defector and boarded the smaller of two planes in which Ryan's party planned to leave Guyana on Nov. 18.

As the plane was preparing to take off, Peoples Temple members opened fire on the California Democrat and other members of his party who were at the other end of the airstrip, killing Ryan, three reporters and a Temple member.

Witnesses said Layton then pulled out a revolver and started shooting at other passengers in the smaller plane, wounding two of them. He also attempted to shoot a third passenger but the gun misfired, witnesses testified.

The court that announced Layton's trial date also dropped murder charges against Stephan Jones, son of the cult founder. It decided he apparently was trying to take the blame for a friend, Charles Beikman.

Beikman has been ordered held in the throat-slashing deaths of Temple spokesman Sharon Amos and her three children Nov. 18 in Georgetown.

Moments after the court absolved Jones, the cult leader's son told reporters he was thinking about writing a book to refute what he said were lies about commune life at Jonestown.

"So far it's a lot of fabrication," Jones said. "Jonestown and Peoples Temple used to be my purpose . . . Now I have acquired a new purpose: to tell the true story."

Two Killed In Grain Elevator Blast

BREMEN (AP) — Two persons were killed, 11 are missing and 17 were injured in an explosion in a grain elevator in this West German port Tuesday night, officials said today.

Police said grain dust in the elevator ignited spontaneously. Damage was estimated at more than $1 million.

MARBLE-LESS

ATHENS (AP) - Six sculptures that are part of an ancient temple on the Acropolis will be moved indoors away from the air pollution that is eroding them and replaced with replicas, Greek Culture Minister Dimitrios Nianias said Tuesday.

The marble figures of women, known as the Karyatids, support a porch on the Erechtheum temple.

The Acropolis is the site of some of the world's greatest sculpture and architectural monuments.

The move is part of a restoration project begun by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization last year after a UNESCO study showed the sculptures have suffered more damage through pollution in the last few years than in the previous four centuries.

Gorilla Cited In Affair

TORONTO — A civil suit before the Ontario Supreme Court involves a man and a woman and the love they shared for a gorilla. The case involves an action brought by Ruth Bowman against Dr. Sidney Solway. Mrs. Bowman is asking Ontario Supreme Court to find that she was a 50-50 partner in Magpie Menagerie Holdings Ltd. and is entitled to half the company's assests. Mr. Justice Donald Keith heard details Tuesday about the company and the relationships among Solway, Mrs. Bowman, a gorilla named Angel and other animials. Solway, a Richmond Hill general practitioner, said he had met Mrs. Bowman after treating her husband as a patient. The relationship evolved because they "shared a keen love for animals." During the course of the relationship, Solway bought a house which at one time they shared with the gorilla. Solway said he spent about $80,000 to renovate the house to accommodate the gorilla. Solway said the relationship began to sour when Mrs. Bowman became involved with a patient of his. He said that one night someone with a car rammed the garage when Angel was in it and the gorilla became upset. "The gorilla was never the same after that . . . I slept in the gorilla house to keep him company and fed him and eventually the humane society came and took him away." Solway said he realized his relationship with Mrs. Bowman was ending when her Doberman bit him. He said that Mrs. Bowman, instead of becoming angry with the dog, hit Solway with a chain.

HOLLYWOOD — In a single bound, Steve McQueen has overtaken Marlon Brando's Superman salary with a $3-million one-film contract that is probably the biggest in movie history. McQueen will be starring in Tai Pan, aa $40-million two-part epic based on James Clavell's novel about an adventurer who marries a Chinese woman in Hong Kong.

SEATTLE — The surviving baby girl of Siamese twins born Oct. 30 will leave Seattle sometime this week for her Anchorage home, a Children's Orthopedic Hospital spokesman said Tuesday. Jessica Susan, now 14 weeks old, weighs 10 pounds, three ounces. Jessica and her sister Amanda Nicole weighed a total of 13 pounds, 14 ounces when they were delivered by Caesarean section at University Hospital in Seattle. Amanda Nicole died Jan. 6 of heart-defect complications.

MANILA — Relatives of Antonisa Agabin were reluctant to bury her when she died last week. The first time they tried, she sat up and asked for a glass of water. That was eight years ago. The Philippine news agency said the woman, a spinster from Tuguegarao in the northern Philippines, first moved a foot, then her head, then sat up during her wake. A sister gave her water, but other mourners fled in fright, the agency said. Last week, when she died, the family delayed the burial, just to make sure. The agency said mourners at the cemetery opened the coffin for a final look before lowering it into the grave.

FORT SILL, Okla. — A pre-wedding shower for a bride-to-be yielded no gifts from the U.S. Army but separate five-day jail terms for a newlywed couple. The shower was the one Pte. Margarette Braman, 20, took in her husband's barracks restroom a week before the wedding. She and Pte. Tracy Joe Lanthrop, 19, pleaded guilty to disobeying a lawful order when she admitted "being in the shower of Room 312, a room occupied by male personnel." They were sentenced to five days confinement at hard labor, 20 days labor without confinement and a $100 fine.

Heaviest Debts in U.S. History

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans increased their debts by the largest amount in history during December as Christmas shoppers kept reaching into their wallets for credit cards, the U.S. government said Tuesday.

The heavy debts are worrying economists, who think consumers may be borrowing more money than they can pay back.

The increased consumer spending has kept the economy rolling and created more jobs. However, U.S. Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller and others say debtors might be unable to pay if a recession hits and people are laid off.

The reserve said consumers increased their total outstanding debts by $4.31 billion in December. That was larger than the November increase of $4.10 billion and the previous record of $4.28 billion set last May.

The biggest increase was in revolving credit card debts. These include credit cards given out by retailers, gasoline companies and commercial banks.

In October, consumers increased their credit card debts by $346 million, in November $865 million and in December $869 million.

For the entire year, U.S. consumers increased their total debts by 19.1 per cent to a total of $275 billion. The increase is faster than inflation, which was about nine per cent. Debt through bank credit cards increased by 33 per cent.

Automobile credit increased by $1.68 billion in December, a smaller increase than the $1.76 billion the month before.

RECORD YEAR FOR GM

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. set sales and profits records in 1978 for the third consecutive year.

GM said fourth-quarter earnings climbed 7.3 per cent from the same period in 1977 to a record $1.004 billion, or $3.51 cents a share, on record sales of $17.7 billion, up 17.2 per cent.

The company said it was the first time ever that profits had exceeded $1 billion in the October-December period.

At the same time, GM said its profit margin dipped to 5.5 per cent, lowest since the recession years of 1974-75.

Nuclear Space Controls Urged

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canadian Ambassador William Barton called on the UN on Tuesday to draw up guidelines governing the operation of nuclear-powered satellites in outer space.

Although he did not mention the Soviet Union's ill-fated Cosmos 954 satellite directly, it was clear Barton had the incident in mind in a speech Tuesday to a subgroup of the UN's committee on the peaceful uses of outer space.

The nuclear-powered Soviet craft fell from orbit last year and broke up over the Northwest Territories, spreading radioactive debris over a wide area.

A special UN study group was later set up at Canada's request in an attempt to find ways of preventing such accidents in future or lessening their impact.

Barton said Tuesday that the objective of the study group should be to gather the necessary scientific and technical knowledge to "pursue the development of guideline or regulations in this area."

He said such guidelines should include the question of developing notification procedures in the event of an accidental re-entry, safety factors involving the size and orbit of nuclear-powered craft and procedures for search and recovery operations in the event of an accident.

Last month, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson presented the Soviet Union with a bill for about $6 million to cover clean-up costs in the Cosmos incident. However, it is not clear whether Moscow intends to pay, since it has never even officially acknowledged that Cosmos 954 was a Soviet craft.

Barton said Canada plans to present detailed proposals for study next week.

He said he hopes all members of the subcommittee will participate in the work of reducing the risks to people and the environment from the use of nuclear power in space vehicles.

Lung Cancer Hope

CHICAGO (UPI) — A new vaccine whose early tests show a high five-year survival rate among victims of lung cancer could be used to help prevent the disease in high-risk patients such as cigarette smokers, a researcher says.

Dr. Jules E. Harris, who recently left the University of Ottawa to become director of medical onocology (cancer science) at Chicago's Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Centre, said he was heartened by the early testing of the vaccine.

Lung cancer victims who were given the vaccine in intervals of 30, 60 and 90 days after surgery achieved a five-year survival rate of 80 per cent, Harris said. That means 80 per cent of the victims who took the vaccine were alive five years later. The usual survival rate for victims undergoing lung cancer surgery is 30 per cent, Harris said.

He also said he is optimistic the vaccine not only could extend the lives of lung cancer victims, but also may one day be used to prevent lung cancer in high-risk patients, such as heavy smokers, who have not contracted the disease.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Brazil Flood Toll 204

SAO PAULO (UPI) — Recent floods in Brazil have killed 204 persons and left 200,000 homeless, government officials said today in a report to President Ernesto Geisel.

The floods have washed out major highways and cut almost all ground transportation between the north and south.

Interior Minister Rangel Reis said Tuesday he made an aerial tour of one badly hit area and could not see any land because of heavy rains that have been falling more than a month.

Helicopter pilots delivering emergency food supplies to isolated villages reported Tuesday seeing hundreds of persons on rooftops and in trees.

The floods first struck the state of Minas Gerais two weeks ago and spread to three other states, covering an area the size of Florida and Maryland.

Officials had found 204 bodies by Tuesday. Another 200,000 persons were homeless and huddled Tuesday, with what possessions they had left, in warehouses, private clubs or wherever they could find shelter.

Unofficial damage estimates were initially placed at $500 million. President Geisel planned to meet today with his Economic Development Council to assess damage to the largely agricultural states.

Ecologists said the floods were caused by the destruction of large forest areas for timber and farmlands, leaving exposed topsoil that is filling river beds and promoting flooding.

Growing Projects for Young

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Parents and teachers of early schoolage youngsters are inclined to be searching for something of interest for an indoor project in February. Growing plants in pots in schoolroom or home can well be the answer, for everyone loves watching things that change and grow. There is excitement and sharing for all ages.

Everyday items that will grow can be found as throwaways in most homes: seeds of citrus fruits (orange, lemon, grapefruit, lime), date stones, grape seeds and avocado seed. And also in kitchens can be found less-likely items to grow, such as green ginger root, whole nutmegs, unroasted coffee beans and the green tops of whole pineapples.

Not all these food items are easy to grow, nor will all produce a crop of the food of which the seeds were a part. But all, with suitable care, have the chance of growing.

The easiest, one that everybody tries who has thought of growing any plant, is the avocado.

Take the seed (which looks solid but contains already a root and a shoot), wash and set broad-end-down in a 4½-inch-wide pot of sandy loam with the top inch or so exposed above soil level. Water well with tepid water, allow to drain and put the pot with a saucer into a polythene (plastic) bag.

Draw the bag up so it fills with air. Secure the open end with a tie. It should stand firmly upright as long as the air remains inside.

Now what is needed is gentle bottom heat, so stand the pot in its bag where warmth will be constant.

For a school class project more than one seed of a kind should be started at the same time, for germination cannot be guaranteed. Total disappointment can be avoided if one out of two or three seeds make a start.

Avocado seeds show a sprout and begin rooting at any time beween 10 days and three weeks according to maturity of the fruits. During this time no more water will be needed under the plastic tent for the wet soil remains wet by the moisture rising into the warm air of the tent and returning to the bottom. Thus no loss occurs.

When a top green shoot is seen, place the avocado pot, still in plastic tent, in a light window, where it is warm, and watch growth.

Meanwhile, teachers or parents can do a little encyclopedia research about the native countries where these and other food plants grow.

At the other end of the scale of growing by amateurs, try a piece of green ginger root. Look for a piece or two having lively, roundish growth buds. You find fresh ginger root sometimes in vegetable displays at this time of year.

Place two pieces side-by-side in a 4½-inch pot of moist mixed sand and screened peat. Keep really warm, around 25 degree C., and shaded from strong light in a sealed plastic bag.

As green shoots emerge, give air twice daily until stems are about three inches high. It can then be taken out of the bag, provided it is kept warm and shaded. Have soil moist at all times.

It may be possible to grow the ginger to flowering stage in July, but ours did not flower in several years of growth. Leaves had a pleasant spicy odor when rubbed, the same as a related plant Amomum cardamom, which grew easily for us in a greenhouse with moderate winter heat.

These tropical plants whose products we use in our more northern climates, make interesting indoor projects for school youngsters or for anyone impatient to begin sowing and growing, either in the garden or on the balcony.

Before the Judge

Sentencing was reserved until Monday after Judge Reg Moir of Kelowna heard lengthy submissions in provincial court Tuesday afternoon on behalf of two former Newfoundland men charged with conspiracy to import marijuana.

Patrick Joseph Murphy, 30, of Limerick, Ireland, and Garrett Ronald O'Brien, 28, also known as Phillip Stanley Ward and Edwin Floyd Terry, a Canadian who has lived in Charlottesville, Va., pleaded guilty Jan. 5 when 13 other men jointly charged were committed for higher court trial.

The case concerns 13 tons of marijuana said to have a wholesale value of $20.8 million which were seized July 15 near Shelter Inlet, 32 kilometres northwest of Tofino.

O'Brien also pleaded guilty to Feb. 28, 1975, charges of possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking and possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficking brought in from Toronto. Crown counsel Gordon MacDonald entered stays of proceedings on charges of simple possession of cocaine and hashish.

MacDonald said a Toronto Metro police search of O'Brien's residence at 31 Four Winds Drive produced seven baggies of cocaine, amounting to 1.5 pounds with a 1975 street value of $45,000, and a brick-sized package of hashish weighing a pound with a street value then of between $1,500 and $2,000. Also found in the house was $1,327 in cash, MacDonald said.

O'Brien failed to appear in a Toronto court July 25, 1975, and a warrant had been outstanding since then, MacDonald added.

Victoria lawyer Patrick Sweeney spoke on behalf of Murphy, Peter Scully of Toronto for O'Brien.

Sweeney asked Moir to note that while the Narcotic Control Act had a minimum sentence of seven years for conspiracy, the Criminal Code, which Sweeney contended created the offence, does not have a minimum punishment.

Sweeney said his client was not "not one of the ringleaders."

He said Murphy was responsible for the travelling on the boat because he was skilled in navigation. He was one of the key operatives in transporting the goods, Sweeney stated, but not one of the higher-up people in the organization.

Sweeney said Murphy's share of the take was $125,000, which reflected that fact.

Sweeney asked the court to consider a recommendation that Murphy serve his sentence at the William Head medium-security federal prison where he could attend the University of Victoria.

Sweeney described Murphy as a model prisoner at Wilkinson Road jail where he spent the last seven months and said he possessed a need to accept challenges, academic or otherwise.

Scully described his client O'Brien as an intelligent, hard-working, extremely loyal and honest man despite the convictions. Scully reminded the judge that O'Brien acted in his own defence at the preliminary hearing which took 3½ weeks and was not obstructive during the proceedings, which he could have been.

He said O'Brien intended to marry 25-year-old Vicki Homm, one of two women discharged following the hearing, and also asked that O'Brien serve his time at William Head.

Scully questioned newspaper descriptions of the operation as a multi-million-dollar operation and suggested it was "more like The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight," and would be almost laughable if it were not so serious.

The Toronto lawyer asked the court to consider the entrapment aspect of the case and suggested the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency might have even supplied the marijuana.

Scully said the number of people smoking marijuana in Canada is staggering, mentioning four million.

"It's not necessarily a good thing or a bad thing," Scully added, "it's just a fact."

The tons of marijuana which flow into North America on a weekly basis would begin to put this case into perspective, he said.

O'Brien had enrolled in a psychology course from the University of B.C. since being in jail and hoped to finish his bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degree while serving out his sentence at William Head, he said.

Scully also said his client found it puzzling that persons committing heinous crimes such as those of violence or fraud were getting lighter jail terms than for conspiracy to import marijuana.

Both men were permitted to speak to the court.

O'Brien admitted the hashish found in Toronto was his but said the cocaine "just happened to be in my apartment."

"As far as I'm concerned, this is the heaviest thing that has happened to me since I was born."

Murphy asked to borrow the Bible used for swearing in witnesses and quoted two passages from the Book of Genesis which dealt with God's creation of plants growing from the earth.

MacDonald, in presenting the Crown's case, referred to a 1975 quarterly report quoting John Farris, then chief justice of the B.C. Appeal Court.

MacDonald noted that Farris said the primary aim in sentencing was the protection of the public and that the object of deterrence was to teach the offender a lesson and to demonstrate to potential offenders the consequences of the law.

In determining the length of sentences in this case, MacDonald continued, the court should take into consideration the premeditation and planning which took place.

He disputed Scully's suggestion of entrapment by the DEA, stating the overt act was under way long before the agency became involved in the case.

He reminded the judge that it was the largest marijuana seizure in Canadian history and it was a sophisticated operation and not a comedy of errors as intimated by Scully.

Judge William Ostler gave a 29-year-old woman a suspended sentence and six months' probation after she pleaded guilty to false pretences and obtaining food by fraud.

Sandra Joyce Ledger, who gave her address as the Yates Hotel, was also ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work and to make restitution within five months.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Ledger purchased $190.05 worth of clothes Nov. 13 from Eaton's with a cheque which was returned marked account closed.

The next day, Mulligan said, she paid for a $20.50 meal at the Coach and Four restaurant at Bastion Square with another cheque which was also returned for the same reason.

Judge Fred Green fined a 53-year-old Vancouver man $675 after finding him guilty of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Sept. 10 in Sidney.

Keith Thompson received the fine following a trial in which evidence was given that two readings of .14 were obtained by Sidney RCMP.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Thompson was convicted of impaired driving in Vancouver on April 23, 1968, and was fined $250 and was also convicted of refusing a breath test demand in Vancouver on Aug. 3, 1972, and fined another $150.

Man Gets Chance To Prove Himself

Andrew John Carter, 19, was given a conditional discharge for a drug offence in county court Tuesday and placed on probation for 15 months.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart said he was satisfied it was in the best interests of Carter that he be given an opportunity to prove himself and this was also not against the public interest.

Carter sold an ounce of the restricted drug mescaline for $25 to an undercover policeman in a transaction Feb. 24 at 2533 Dowler Place where he was living.

Stewart said if the conditional discharge didn't work and Carter got into trouble with the law, then he would be brought back to county court and the discharge revoked. But if the conditional discharge worked, Carter will be a good citizen which was in the best interest of society.

Also in county court, Judge Leslie Cashman found Stephen Roy Kohl, 18, not guilty of breaking and entering 215-531 West Bay Terrace with intent to commit an indictable offence on May 5.

Cashman said the sole issue was identification but the evidence of identification was extremely weak and the prosecution failed to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt.

In another case, he ordered a bench warrant issued for the arrest of Bradley William Harris, 19, who failed to appear for his trial. He is accused of possession of a stolen motorcycle in Victoria in July 28, 1977.

Retro is the 40's suit look, but with a '79 difference. The changes: the cut of the jacket. Shorter, slightly curved, slightly shaped through the shoulder. And the new all-out legginess of the skirt — streamlined, side slit. It's a change for the body — and for the better. And notice as the line narrows and the skirt shortens, the waist gets more defined. But it isn't the inches that count — it's the curves. Now We Can Win! Crow Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — Happy Liberals, poring over polls showing them gaining on the Opposition Progressive Conservatives for the second month running, said today they have the momentum needed to win the next general election.

"I think it demonstrates the continued upward mobility of the Liberal party," said Senator Al Graham, party president, as he and other Liberal parliamentarians gathered for their regular weekly meeting.

"Our momentum is steady."

The latest Gallup poll, conducted in early January and released today, showed Conservatives with a static 40 per cent of the decided vote [illegible] with 39 per cent, the New Democratic Party down one at 17 per cent and others with four per cent.

All changes, including a drop to a still sizeable 29 per cent from 33 per cent in the number of undecided voters, are within what pollsters describe as their margin of error.

Prime Minister Trudeau brushed aside questions about the poll.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark, despite his virtual tie with Trudeau's Liberals in the popularity rating, said he would form "a majority Conservative government" if an election was held today.

"I'm naturally encouraged we are still ahead," Clark said prior to a private meeting with his MPs.

"I think that there has been very little movement in Liberal popularity for the last little while."

Works Minister Judd Buchanan noted that the poll was taken before Clark's haphazard tour of the world in January, before the Opposition leader's controversial call for a "stimulative deficit" and before internal Tory turmoil over the question of negotiating sovereignty association with Quebec.

Those factors all would have a negative impact on the Conservative showing in next months's poll, Buchanan said.

"The Tory bubble has burst," said a spokesman for NDP Leader Ed Broadbent. In November, Clark had a 10-percentage-point lead over Trudeau's Liberals.

Clark said he hopes Trudeau's slight gain will encourage the prime minister to call an election now.

"We are going to count on the poll in which Canadians have a chance to vote rather than in the Gallup itself," Clark said.

[illegible] Minister Len Marchand said he is particularly pleased with Liberal gains in his native British Columbia.

"Now things are looking good," he said.

The party would capture more B.C. seats in the coming election than it did during the July 8, 1974 vote. Then, Liberals took eight of 23 in the province.

. . .Drunken Skateboarder Pays Penalty

BRIGHTON (Reuter) — A British soldier was fined £15 ($35 Canadian) on Tuesday when an English court found him guilty of being drunk and disorderly in an incident involving a skateboard.

Police said Godfrey McDonnell, 20 was charged after he fell down a flight of steps while riding the skateboard.

He was naked at the time except for a crash helmet and sneakers.

BNA Nearer Home?

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers edged closer Tuesday to agreement on guaranteed human and language rights in a new constitution.

But they remained split on the amending formula for a proposed new constitution and future division of federal-provincial powers.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he now feels free to rewrite basic laws in areas under federal control — such as laws protecting national language rights.

However, he said future moves to rewrite the constitution pose serious problems for his government.

As a result of the conference, provinces will be able to provide one-stop divorce, custody and property-settlement courts, legal areas to now straddled both federal and provincial jurisdictions.

Trudeau described the conference as a success, but not so Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta, who wants greater provincial control over natural resources.

Much to the chagrin of several premiers, B.C. Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said he was concerned the proposed constitutional equalization of wealth among the provinces was too rigid and said B.C. wanted more time to study it.

Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney virtally broke up the conference in confusion Tuesday when he attacked Trudeau and Ontario Premier William Davis for pushing patriation of the British North America Act prematurely.

Price Jack-Up Inflates Profits 21% in Year

Times News Services

Canadian companies jacked up prices last year and increased profits 21 per cent over a year earlier, the government's inflation monitoring agency said Tuesday.

The centre for study of inflation of productivity said the 21 per cent increase in profits for the first nine months of 1978, to $9.3 billion, was made although sales had increased only 11 per cent.

The centre said this indicates higher profits came from higher profit margins.

The centre said that although it recognized that profits had to be increased from their erratic levels of the 1970s, the increase should be gradual so as not to set off a further round of inflation.

It said the higher earnings should be at least partially reinvested to create more jobs and contribute to the longer-term recovery of the economy.

The centre's report singled out for particular notice the 45 per cent increase in profits in the retail trade sector, saying that large department stores increased profits by 87 per cent in the period, motor vehicle dealers cleared an additional 42 per cent and food stores 42 per cent more.

Other retailers showed an increase in profits of 33 per cent, the centre said.

Meanwhile, in the Commons, Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand gave the opposition vague assurances the government will do something about rapidly rising food prices.

Former consumer affairs minister Herb Gray of Windsor, Ont., said growing public concern over rising prices and high profits in certain sectors of the economy may convince the government it is time to establish some kind of selected controls program.

Gray foresaw the possibility of legislation which would prevent companies from increasing prices to consumers so they could make healthy profits.

On Monday New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent called for the establishment of a selective price control program if companies will not volunteer to keep their profits to what he called reasonable levels.

Whopping Profits Poured into Banks

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers and businesses paid chartered banks between $200 million and $500 million in excess profits between 1968-73, a report published by the Economic Council of Canada says.

Released Tuesday, it says the extra earnings by the chartered banks also resulted in excess taxes of $200 million to $400 million being collected during the period.

"If no excess profits and excess taxes had been earned by the Canadian bank shareholders and Canadian governments, then the cost of banking services to consumers would have been lower than that prevailing during the 1968-73 period," the report says.

"For example, borrowers of bank funds could have been charged a lower rate of interest and lenders to the banks could have earned a higher return on deposits."

Although published by the Economic Council of Canada, the report carried a disclaimer saying the findings had not been endorsed by members of the council and were the personal responsibility of the author, Jack Mintz.

Mintz says in the forward the study was done to determine if the banks earned excess profits since 1967, after the present version of the Bank Act was passed. The Bank Act is under review again and proposed amendments are before the Commons finance committee.

'Con Man' Ducks Jail For $36,000 Fraud

Gordon Bruce Barlow, a 35-year-old city businessman with a criminal record for white collar offences, was given a suspended sentence in county court Tuesday and placed on probation for three years for four worthless-cheque offences involving $35,775.

Judge Leslie Cashman told Barlow if he gets into more difficulties with the law he doubted that any court would do anything else than jail him.

"It's up to you," he said.

Barlow, who operated Works West and Design Research while working as a building designer, pleaded guilty Jan. 16 to two counts of fraud and two counts of false pretence.

His lawyer, David Wilson, had urged the suspended sentence and probation approach while Crown counsel Peter Birkett, who called Barlow a "professional con, no more, no less," urged a penitentiary term — two years or more.

Judge Cashman said he considered it an exceptional case. He said probation is a form of punishment and he attached four conditions:

— For the first year, Barlow must report once every two weeks and thereafter once a month to a lay probation officer.

— Barlow must make restitution to West Coast Savings Credit Union, 2067 Cadboro Bay Road, for $2,850 and to Alpina G.T. Accessories Ltd. of Vancouver for $2,162 before his probation expires.

— He must make reasonable efforts to find employment but it must be only as an employee. He is prohibited from being a principal or manager of any firm.

— Barlow must seek psychological therapy.

Gunman Gets $200 At Store

City police today are looking for a quiet-spoken gunman who held up a grocery store at 1903 Birch Tuesday night.

A police spokesman said the man entered Turner's Grocery about 7:30 p.m., pulled out a black handgun, and ordered storekeeper Mrs. Lee Wallis to hand over the money in the till.

Mrs. Wallis placed the cash — about $200 — in a brown paper bag and the man left.

Mrs. Wallis said the man was in his 40s, of average build with short, brown hair and dressed in a black-and-white checkered shirt or jacket.

She told police the man was quiet-spoken and his manner was cool and deliberate.

BANK SQUAD DRAGNETS BOMBERS

VANCOUVER (UPC) — A special task force began investigating three recent bank bombings Tuesday amid fears the bombers may soon strike again.

Police S.Sgt. Bob Burns said the bombings, so far the cause of about $235,500 damage seem to be occurring "about once every five or six days."

In all three incidents, firebombs were thrown through windows of national bank branches.

$250 AN OUNCE A GOLD RECORD

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold hit a record high of $250 an ounce in London and Zurich today amid continued heavy buying, sparked partly by political uncertainty in Iran and the continuing decline of the U.S. dollar.

Gold, a traditional hedge in times of monetary uncertainty, opened in London at $246.37 an ounce, $2.12 above Tuesday's closing price and just short of Monday's record of $246.50.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed the mid-morning price at a record $249, but soon after the price had soared to $250 in what dealers described as a "very busy market."

In Zurich, Europe's main bullion market, gold hit $250.12 by mid-morning.

B of M Union Signs Contract

Employees at a Victoria branch of the Bank of Montreal have become the first unionized bank workers in the city to sign a collective agreement with their employer.

The nine employees, members of the United Steelworkers of America, signed a contract Tuesday with the bank's branch at 3481 Cook St.

Terms of the one-year agreement, effective Feb. 16, include a nine-per-cent increase in wages.

Roy Legge of Toronto, director of industrial relations for the bank, said today the provisions of the contract match those given non-union personnel in January.

Negotiations began last September, Legge said, and about eight meetings were held. Agreement was reached without the need for a federal conciliator, the first time this has been achieved in negotiations between major banks and unions in Canada.

The spokesman for the steelworkers union was not available for comment.

The USA is among several unions which have authority from the Canadian Labor Congress to organize bank workers across Canada on behalf of the CLC's Union of Bank Employees.

The CLC has stated that eventually the organizing unions will turn over bank employees to the UBE.

The Victoria bank workers are not the first in B.C. to reach a collective agreement.

Last December, the Bank of Montreal signed a contract with employees in Agassiz and Ashcroft. They are members of the Office and Technical Employees Union.

Auto Workers Join U.K. Strike

Times News Services

LONDON — Britain's wave of national strikes today spread to its biggest automaker and export earner, British Leyland, and raised fears that the company's future might be jeopardized.

Nearly 19,000 workers at British Leyland's largest plant in Longbridge, Birmingham walked out to protest the company's refusal to grant a productivity bonus. Company officials said the workers do not turn out enough vehicles to earn the bonus.

Elsewhere, conditions worsened during the five-week-old wage revolt by more than 1½ million workers that has threatened to topple the Labor government. More than 1,200 schools remained closed and most hospitals were only admitting emergency patients.

Pay talks in the National Health Service broke down and public service workers threatened to step up their widespread action.

Wildcat strikes and slowdowns by non-medical staff already have forced half of Britain's 2,300 hospitals to refuse all admissions except emergencies and almost the entire ambulance service is dealing only with urgent cases. Soldiers are performing some tasks.

Meanwhile, the leaders of more than one million low-paid public-service workers, including garbage collectors, school janitors and gravediggers, threatened to increase their disruptive industrial action unless local council employers come up with a much-bigger pay offer today.

As the garbage piled higher on city streets, the dead remained unburied and more schools closed, Prime Minister James Callaghan told Parliament that some workers "seem to think the sky's the limit" on pay claims.

The minority Labor party government emerged bruised from the fourth of a series of debates on the crisis. Their majority, which stood at 24 in the first debate Jan. 16, slipped to six when an Opposition challenge on a technical motion was defeated by 276 votes to 270.

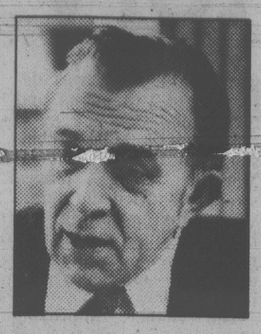
New Driving Range in the Rough And Facing Tricky Recovery Shot



Ald. John Mika says the driving range problems back up his call for a master plan on recreation.

Ald. Geoff Vantreight has been handed the job of drumming up more business for struggling range.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich municipality's new golf driving range isn't — so far, at least — a thriving range.

The recreational facility on the municipally-owned Cedar Hill golf course, which allows golfers to practise their swing under cover, stands deserted much of the time.

Built last year at a cost of $250,000 (with the assistance of a $86,666 grant from the provincial government), the range has earned only about $7,700 in revenue in the seven months since it opened July 10.

Officials say that translates to about 3,800 customers.

Recently Ald. Sandy Noel was so concerned about the poor use of the range he proposed cutting the rates in half. But he hastily changed his mind after protests of unfair competition from owners of private driving ranges.

Meanwhile, critics have said publicly that the entire project was ill-conceived, badly designed and unnecessary.

They claim the range isn't long enough or wide enough, its fences should have been higher and the range should not have been built facing into the prevailing westerly gales.

But Mayor Mel Couvelier and parks and recreation director Bill Young say they are not the least bit pessimistic and that the new facility should be allowed time to prove itself.

Couvelier dismissed fears that the driving range could turn out to be a white elephant, although he was careful to point out that the decision to proceed with the project was taken by a previous council.

He explained that the proposal orginated from a now-defunct ad hoc group called the Cedar Hill golf course committee, consisting of aldermen and some golf club members.

"That had the effect of removing staff from direct responsibility," he said. "When the committee itself got involved this became one of those group-decision deals in which no one feels responsible."

Couvelier said he believes the decision to provide the driving range was basically right but he is unhappy with the way the facility was designed and its present use.

However, he said he has asked Ald. Geoff Vantreight, the newly-appointed parks and recreation committee chairman, to examine the problem and produce some recommendations for stimulating better patronage.

Recreation director Bill Young is confident the driving range will attract customers as the weather improves.

"Almost no one thinks about golf in the middle of winter," he says, "but sure as spring arrives it brings out the golfers by the score.

"I will be concerned if it isn't the busiest place in town by the time April and May roll around."

Vantreight echoed his comments, noting that of the course's 700-plus regular users only about 40 play all winter long.

In better weather as the course becomes congested the driving range will come into its own, he believes, because golfers waiting for a game will pass the time by "driving a few buckets of balls."

Ald. John Mika, who complained last year about the costly "enrichment" of facilities at the course, said the driving range situation points up again the need for a comprehensive master plan on recreation.

"My concern was that, faced with all kinds of recreational needs for the people of Saanich, we were concentrating too much on golf without any documentation that that was where the money was needed," he said.

"I was not opposed to golf per se, but to the fact that money was being spent there without any adequate consideration or survey of the global needs of the municipality."

Mika said the impetus for the Cedar Hill improvements — including a $120,000 addition to the clubhouse — came largely from an ad hoc committee "loaded with aldermen who are devoted golfers."

Curtis Knocks UVic Over Maltwood Sale

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis has told the University of Victoria he disapproves of its plans to sell the Maltwood Estate in Royal Oak.

In a strongly-worded letter to UVic President Howard Petch, Curtis said many Greater Victoria residents feel the estate has a historical significance and predicted the sale would have a negative impact on the community.

Curtis said he is disappointed with the university's attitude toward the six-acre property.

"I'm greatly distressed by the intention of the university to sell property which it so enthusiastically received just a few years ago."

Petch wrote to Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier asking if Saanich would be interested in acquiring the property for municipal purposes.

If Saanich declines it will probably be put on the open market, he said.

UVic wants to sell or rent the property and use the money to enhance its Maltwood collection, now in the new University Centre on campus.

Curtis said although the buildings and site are not classified heritage, they are considered by many with a strong attachment to Greater Victoria to have a special significance, Curtis said in his letter.

"Knowing of your desire to continue to improve relations between the university and the community this decision can't help but have a very negative impact on that relationship," the letter stated.

Curtis suggested during a meeting with Petch that UVic offer the estate to Saanich.

Petch said no sale price has been placed on the estate.

Q. How are squirrels caught and how many does it take to make a fur coat? P.C.

A. A local furrier says squirrels are mostly shot through the head with 22 bullets by Indians. Depending on the style and the amount of fur required, it takes somewhere between 225 and 250 pelts to make a fur coat.

Petty Games Played On Marina — Wright

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

North Saanich Mayor George Westwood isn't telling the whole story in defending his rejection of a housing and marina development at Tsehum Harbor, developer Bob Wright said today.

Wright took issue with Westwood's claim that if council had accepted the proposal it would have meant a development resulting in a density of eight houses per acre instead of two as permitted under present zoning.

"He knows that's not true," Wright said. "Our starting point was six units an acre . . . and we were prepared to go with even less."

Wright accused Westwood of "petty political gamesmanship" in blocking the development proposal which was approved in principle by the advisory planning commission and municipal planner.

He said that because of Westwood's attitude, the municipality now stands to lose 12 to 13 acres including nearly a mile of shorefront which Wright was prepared to donate if his proposal to expand Bosun's Marina and build a cluster-housing development was allowed.

"Now I'm afraid that deal is dead as long as George Westwood is mayor," Wright said. "It would be a waste of time even discussing it with North Saanich council."

Wright said it is ironic that if his proposal had been accepted the number of houses would have been less than the number permitted under the present zoning.

Twenty-two acres of the 37-acre parcel are zoned for single-family residences on half-acre lots, thus allowing a maximum of 44 houses.

His proposal would have involved building a maximum of 40 units in a cluster setting on about six or seven acres.

Wright said he would have dropped that to a maximum of 20 units if council had insisted.

"The housing development has always been secondary," he said. "Our primary interest is expanding the marina to make it more economical."

Wright said there is no doubt in his mind Westwood has stacked the APC with supporters, an accusation which Westwood has denied.

However, this week former APC chairman Adrien Gilmore said he would not stand for re-election because of council's selection of commission members. He charged political interference by Westwood and council.

Wright said he has no other option but to go ahead with development plans for the 22-acre section as allowed by zoning.

He said he will go to the provincial land commission within the next 30 days to petition removal of the property from the agricultural land reserve.

He said he expects a favorable decision as tests indicate the soil is unsuitable for farming.

However, Westwood has vowed to try to block any development on the site.

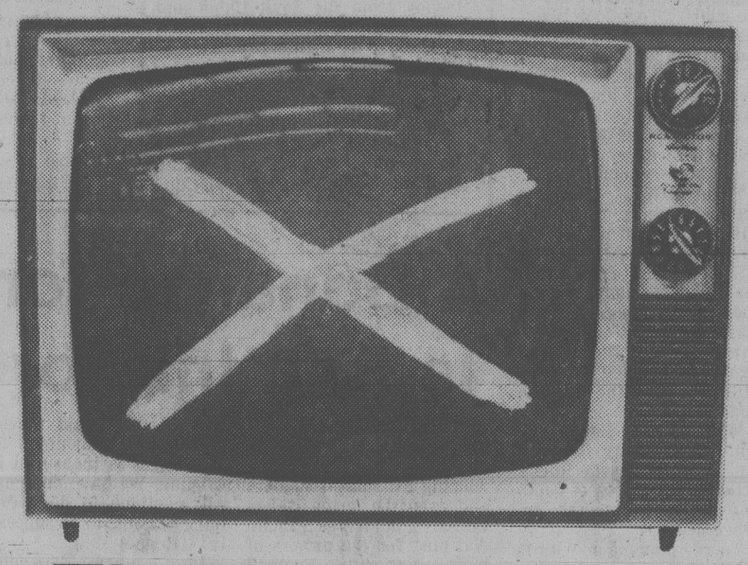
Repairs Okayed For Icebreaker

The icebreaker Camsell, holed by Arctic ice Sept. 11, will be repaired.

H.O. Buchanan, the department of transport's regional director for marine services in Vancouver, said today results of a $50,000 study by Westinghouse on repairs needed in the engine room are encouraging enough to order a go-ahead.

He expected tenders to be called in early April.

Meanwhile, the federal treasury board has approved funds for chartering an offshore vessel to carry out servicing of large navigational buoys and other duties normally done by Camsell in March and April.



Okay, That's It! Time for LBT

max low

For some time it's been lurking near the borders of our minds, I know.

But it took that story the other day of the teen-aged girl who shot the principal and custodian of a school to death to make us cross over: we're starting our own Let's Boycott Television campaign.

We — the adults at our place (being the only ones who get a vote) — have decided to unplug our set ceremoniously on March 1 and put it away somewhere well out of sight for a six-month trial period. After that time we will decide either that we are dotty without it and must have it back, or that it has gone to stay.

Once before, a few years ago, we did this quite accidentally. Our set broke down and when I took it in to be repaired I noticed that after the first week everyone stopped asking when it was coming back. So I didn't bother to pick it up for five months.

Now, having been brought up in New Zealand in the days of radio only, we weren't ingrained with television. We watch very little at our place, actually. But still, what you do watch becomes addictive and must have an effect on the young and growing.

"Television is a very seductive thing," says a friend of mine who has just sold his set and vows to live without it. And you know, he's right for it lures you into watching all sorts of rubbish and almost dictates that you sip more beers and nibble more tidbits than you would otherwise. In all honesty, do you munch as much while reading a good book? Of course you don't.

Perhaps it wouldn't have seemed so bad if that teenager in San Diego had shot the principal because her marks were bad. But the thought that she admits getting the idea from TV shows like S.W.A.T. which she watches regularly is a little too close to home.

It is not hard to see the effect seemingly harmless shows have on your own children.

My three youngsters love to watch CHiPs, which is about a couple of nice friendly California Highway Patrol officers who ride around on motorcycles helping people and even stopping to do little things like show kids the right way (and place) to skateboard so they won't get run over. But even that has violence and a lot of high-speed car and bike chases that I'm sure sow the seeds for many of the incidents that blossom on our highways.

When it ends, my seven-year-old son Jason's eyes mirror the action and with his hands he revs up his imaginary throttles and races around the living room (on his feet, of course) crashing into everything.

But what gets me is the Incredible Hulk, that mild-mannered man who turns into a monster. Though he, too, always ends up doing good (what else) and helping someone, I'm not sure I can stand much longer the sight of a son literally turning green, making with that awful face and overturning the furniture . . .

Another one they like is Chopper Squad, a fairly slick crime show filmed in Australia and portraying the vital air-sea rescue service on the coast of New South Wales. But it, too, can be violent with guns used and land and water chases involved. That's the thing about television — everyone seems to be chasing someone. No one ever stays still.

Then there's all those ads which come at you again and again until they are printed on your brain and turning the set off doesn't help because your kids wander around singing the jingles.

I swear if I have to listen to those ridiculous women say 'it does a lot for you, uh huh, a lot' one more time, I will place my foot through the screen.

So you can see, I'm rapidly reaching the stage where I need release from the hypnotic hold.

And who knows, perhaps my Let's Boycott Television movement will grow.

Maybe you'll tell two friends and they'll tell two friends and so on and so on . . .

Still Chance For Library After Meeting

The possibility of a new central library is still alive following a meeting between Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis and mayors for the four core municipalities.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young said today the discussions were positive and he feels the provincial government will come up with the financing that's needed to make the move possible.

Young said the mayors reaffirmed their position on the matter and it's now up to the province to either come up with a start-up grant of $400,000 or see the library remain in its Yates Street building.

"Everybody agrees that it (the building now available on Broughton) would be the best possible prospect for Greater Victoria and nobody want to see it slip by," said Young.

He added the mayors made it clear to Curtis there is no way the municipalities will change their position on the need for a substantial grant.

"We just haven't got the capability of taking it back for another go-round."

LAWYER TO LEAD LIBRARY

City lawyer Michael Whittaker, 37, was elected chairman of the Greater Victoria Library Board on Tuesday.

Whittaker, who succeeds Gordon Hutcheson, beat out Ald. Shirley Dowell of Oak Bay.

Ald. Larry Mann of Esquimalt was elected vice-chairman, replacing Dowell who had held that position for four years.
